Sabotage Wave Follows Allied Attack on Dieppe

By EDWARD W. BEATTIE

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(BUP)—A new surge of patriot activities in German-occupied western Europe was reported today as the result of the Allied raid on Dieppe, and Vichy France took stern new repressive measures to discourage patriots from aiding the Allies in their next attack.

E. W. Beattie

A big explosion occurred yesterday in Henrik Ibsen street in Oslo, Norway, near a Quisling police station, British sources reported. Twenty armed Belgian patriots overpowered guards at a mine near Marcinelle, seized 25 cases of dynamite and 3,100 detonators and threw them to the bottom of the shaft, where they exploded. All escaped. Two Belgian patriots were killed by the Nazis for "endangering German occupation forces."

In Holland, Netherlands authorities reported, Boy Scouts "Cubs" organized by a secret woman leader started a campaign of derision against German occupation troops.

In groups of three and four, the

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 22. — (CP) — The Canadian attack on Dieppe was carried farthest inland by the lion-hearted Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg, who fought their way 3½ miles up the Scie river valley with unsurpassed bravery, halting at a point almost due south of Pourville.

In the face of heavy German fire they landed at 5:35 a.m. and fought with courageous determination and ringing heroism until they withdrew about 11 a.m. They preserved good order and splendid discipline right to the last.

Maj. Robert Thompson of Winnipeg one of those who came back, said the withdrawal was the bravest action he ever saw. Now acting second-in-command, this veteran of the last war went through the first battles of Ypres and Loos.

"I never saw anything like it for bravery all through the last war," the officer said. "Our boys were simply magnificent."

Ahead of the Camerons, the South Saskatchewan Regiment had established a bridgehead at 5 a.m. and occupied the town of Pourville. The Camerons came in under some shellfire and landed under fairly heavy fire on the left side of the beach.

The Highlanders scaled the 10-foot seawall and formed up in a grove of trees along the Pourville front.

Then they started to attack inland, moving through the South Saskatchewan troops who were

City Officer is Secretary to Defence Chief

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.—(CP)—Appointment of H. A. Dyde of Edmonton as military secretary to Defence Minister Ralston, with the rank of colonel, was announced last night by National Defence headquarters.

Col. Dyde, who succeeds Col. Clyde Scott, who died last fall, first came to National Defence headquarters in December, 1939, as special assistant to Defence Minister Norman Rogers, later killed in an airplane crash.

ASSISTED POWER

After Mr. Rogers' death he served for a time as special assistant to Air Minister Power and then was loaned, because of his knowledge of Newfoundland and conditions there, to C. J. Burchell when the latter left his appointment as Canadian high commissioner to Australia to assume a similar post in Newfoundland.

He has been secretary to the defence council almost since its organization and also has acted as secretary of the air council, an advisory body to the air minister.

A veteran of the first Great War, Col. Dyde is a prominent Edmonton barrister in civil life. As a Rhodes scholar, he attended Oxford after his demobilization and then returned to Alberta and was admitted to the bar of that province in 1924. From then until the outbreak of the present war, he practised law there and lectured in the faculty of law at the University of Alberta.

Interpreting War News

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Nazis must meet the challenge of the aerial power the United Nations are steadily building up in the British Isles or accept heavy odds in the prospective fight to prevent establishment of a second front in western Europe.

The manner in which the German air force's wings were clipped as a part of the Dieppe venture suggests that Hitler may be obliged to accept the challenge sooner than anticipated. The German air command, it is asserted in London, was caught napping by the magnitude of the air support given the Dieppe attack, with the result that the Court Actions Pend Against 20 Builders

Twenty prosecutions for infractions of Edmonton's building bylaws are pending and others will be instituted following investigation, Max W. Dewar, assistant city architect, stated Saturday.

Fourteen of the impending prosecutions were directed by city council after a survey made several months ago revealed flagrant infractions of the building and zoning bylaws.

Mr. Dewar said some infractions had occurred lately. These were being investigated and would result in prosecutions unless remedy of the infraction was made.

As a result of the survey it was discovered that more than 1,600 infractions of the building and zoning bylaws had been committed over a period of years, and had not been detected. It was pointed out at the meetings considering action against the violators that the inspection staff made available to the city architect's office was inadequate to thoroughly check the city.

Thomas E. Garside, K.C., and Mr. Dewar are now preparing the cases against the violators to be prosecuted, and it is expected that summonses will be issued within the next 10 days.

Give Permits For Export of Feeds

OTTAWA, Aug. 22—(CP)—The agricultural supplies board announced today that, effective at once, permits will be used freely for export of western-grown barley, oats and rye.

The free granting of permits will apply only to the crop produced in areas where the Dominion freight assistance policy does not apply, thus confining the arrangement to prairie production. The freight assistance policy applies to eastern provinces and British Columbia, which are assisted in bringing in supplies of prairie grains for feed purposes.

All permits issued must be made use of before Nov. 30, the announcement said.

The Canadian wheat board has undertaken responsibility of supervising all permits, before they are accepted by the export permit branch of the trade and commerce department which exercises control over export of commodities which may be required for home needs.

Continue Patrols Of French Coast

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(BUP)—The Allies are maintaining a constant air patrol of the German-held French coast. Both Canadian and British fliers are shuttling back and forth across the channel today for sweeps of northern France.

Wins D.F.C.

FO. John R. Sterne, R. C. A. F., son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sterne, 10159 118 street, who has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "disregard to danger" and "fine fighting spirit".

FO. J. R. Sterne Wins D.F.C. For Gallant Acts

Complete disregard of his own personal danger, combined with a fine fighting spirit, and destruction of enemy shipping, won for FO. John R. Sterne of this city, the Distinguished Flying Cross, according to an official announcement from Ottawa.

Both his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sterne, 10159 118 street, were informed of the award by The Bulletin, immediately the information came through from Ottawa. Modest in the achievements of their son, Mr. and Mrs. Sterne expressed their pride in him, and the contribution he is making on behalf of his country to the Allied cause.

FO. Sterne's citation read:

"This officer has displayed a fine fighting spirit which combined with his complete disregard to danger has won the confidence and admiration of his fellow pilots.

NOTABLE SUCCESS

"He has secured notable success in night bombing attacks on enemy shipping. In one period of three nights when operating alone against shipping, he destroyed a 4,000-ton ship which was heavily defended by some 12 escort vessels and damaged several armed ships with machine-gun fire. He has also assisted in the destruction of a 1,200-ton enemy coaster in daylight."

FO. Sterne was born in this city on Sept. 26, 1922. He attended Oliver school and the University of Alberta for one year, enrolling in classes before he was 17.

On his 18th birthday, Sept. 26, 1940, he joined the R.C.A.F. and on Oct. 10, 1940, left to commence training, which was carried out at Toronto, Picton, Hamilton and later at Summerside, P.E.I., where he was graduated and received his wings.

He ended his embarkation leave on July 5, 1941, and receiving his commission before he went overseas, he was posted to Iceland for a brief period.

Since Nov. 6, 1941, he has been steadily on active service, engaged in the type of operations which brought him the D.F.C.

Only last Saturday his mother received a clipping from a London newspaper, showing him as one of a group of nine men in his squadron, a truly international squadron of men from nine nations battling the Axis partners. One of the group had shot down nine planes in 10 days.

"We are very proud of him and proud that he is playing his part in the fight for liberty and freedom," said Mr. Sterne.

War Plants In Warsaw Raided, Soviet Reports

MOSCOW, Aug. 22 — (AP) — The Moscow radio announced last night that Soviet planes bombed Warsaw, East Prussia and Upper Silesia Thursday night.

"A large force of bombers was engaged in the raid which was directed against war industries," the report said.

It added 14 "very large" fires were observed in Warsaw and 19 explosions were counted.

A large number of fires and big explosions were observed in raided districts of East Prussia and Upper Silesia, the report said.

670 ARE KILLED

Marines Wipe Out Jap Attack Force

PEARL HARBOR, Aug. 22—(AP)—United States marines mopping up Japanese in the Solomon Islands killed 670 of an enemy force of 700 men and captured the remainder Thursday, a communique issued by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, U. S. pacific fleet commander, said last night.

The action occurred, the communique said, after a night time attempt by the Japanese to land the 700 troops from high speed boats in an effort to break through the Marines' lines.

Marine losses were 28 killed and 72 injured.

Admiral Nimitz's communique said:

"Since the initial successful landings in the Solomons by United States forces under the command of Vice-Admiral Robert L. Ghormley a period of mopping up in order to consolidate our positions has been in progress.

LANDED AUGUST 7

"The marines, with a navy covering force, made the first landings in the Solomons the night of Aug. 7.)

"Japanese defenders took to the hills and jungles to escape from our forces. There have been daily skirmishes between United States marine patrols and enemy detachments. In these actions, both sides have suffered casualties.

"On Aug. 19 the marines, with a loss of six killed and 13 wounded, wiped out a Japanese detachment of 92 officers and men. Enemy resistance continued until the last man was killed.

"On the night of Aug. 20 the enemy landed a force of about 700 well-equipped troops from high speedboats outside the marines' lines and attempted to break through.

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHT

"During the darkness only hand-to-hand fighting was possible, but with the turning of the day the marines were able to manoeuvre. While one battalion held the front line another battalion moved to a flank and drove the then-withdrawing Japanese to the beach.

"The action continued until late afternoon. Of the 700 Japanese, 670 are dead, and the rest prisoners. Marine losses were 28 killed and 72 wounded.

"The marines in the Solomons who are under the command of Maj.-Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, S.M.C., have added another page to their history of outstanding achievements."

The communique gave no indication as to where the 700 attacking Japanese came from, or which of the islands now in the hands of the marines was the scene of the action.

Capt. Nelson Inglis Served at Dieppe

At least one Edmonton man participated in Wednesday's epochal raid on Dieppe. He was Capt. Nelson Inglis of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps. Serving with an ambulance unit he crossed with the assaulting forces and after assisting in caring for the wounded from the beaches of Dieppe, returned to England. He is the son of Mrs. Alice A. Inglis, 9937 104 street, and a grandson of the late J. A. McDougall, pioneer city business man.

Capt. Inglis was born here and attended city schools and was graduated from the University of Alberta and later took post graduate work at McGill University. Prior to enlisting he practiced at various points in the Dominion.

Mrs. Inglis has received word from Capt. Inglis of his participation in and return from the raid.

Reds Hit Huns Hard in Bend Of Don River

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Red army men drove back the Germans in the Kletskaya area of the Don Bend northwest of Stalingrad by a surprise attack last night while the Germans generally maintained the initiative in other southern theatres, the Russians said today.

Close-quarter fighting developed from the Soviet thrust and the Nazi survivors were reported to have left on the battlefield 200 dead, two field guns, eight machine guns, 13 munitions trucks and a radio station.

This relatively-limited operation and a report that Russian detachments, forced ever deeper into the central Caucasus, had pinched off and wiped out German vanguards in the hills southeast of Pyatigorsk were balanced by announcement of sustained Nazi attacks southeast of Kletskaya, northeast of Kotelnikovski and southeast of Krasnodar.

POUND RIFLEMEN

Several small German forces, mostly automatic riflemen, which crossed the Don at its curve southwest of Kletskaya in an attempt to outflank by a bridgehead only about 40 miles from Stalingrad, were declared by Moscow newspapers to be suffering heavy punishment.

Soviet troops were said to be cutting down a German infantry column mouse-trapped behind a minor Nazi tank penetration southwest of the Stalingrad industrial centre on the Volga.

SECOND OFFENSIVE

U.S. Navy, Marines Blast Japs in Gilbert Islands

By WALTER B. CLAUSEN

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii, Aug. 22. — (AP) — United States marines and naval forces, with Maj. James Roosevelt, the president's son, participating, struck at Japanese forces on Makin Island in the northern end of the Gilbert Islands early this week, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific naval commander, said yesterday.

Admiral Nimitz said that the marines, supported by naval forces, "made a successful landing on the island Aug. 17 in an operation aimed at destroying Japanese seaplane installations.

The attack was the second offensive staged by American forces against the Japanese since Aug. 7, when the Americans launched an attack on the Solomon Islands.

The purpose of the attack was "accomplished in its entirety," and the attacking force "has been withdrawn," the communique said.

At least 80 Japanese were killed and radio installations and stores were destroyed, while two seaplanes were destroyed on the water.

The commando-type raid also resulted in losses inflicted on the enemy by heavy bombing attacks, the communique said.

United States naval ships sank one small enemy transport and one gunboat.

(Prior to Admiral Nimitz's announcement, the Tokyo radio had reported that 200 American troops effected a landing on Makin, but said they were repulsed.)

Makin is the northernmost of the Gilbert island group, being located approximately 1,100 miles northeast of the Solomon islands.

THANK FRENCH PEOPLE

British stations last night broadcast a message to the French people conveying the thanks of the imperial general staff for their co-operation in the Dieppe attack.

"At 6.15 Wednesday morning we asked the population of the Dieppe area to avoid all action which might endanger their own security," the message said. "This request was preceded, you will remember, several weeks before by a more general warning addressed to inhabitants of the coastal area bidding them in their own interests to evacuate prohibited areas and advising them not to take part in event of a military operation.

"Today after the Dieppe affair we are eager to congratulate the French people living in the region on the scrupulous way in which our advice was followed.

HOMAGE TO DEAD

"By the side of the heavy losses of fighting troops on both sides there have been unfortunately a number of casualties among the French people. We desire to pay homage to those Frenchmen who lost their lives as well as to our own men.

"We wish to thank you all who by your spirit, understanding and sang froid continued to keep the number of fatal casualties down to the minimum.

"We also fully recognize the sensible behavior of our French friends who made the task of the troops very much easier.

"Instructions given you up to now hold good. Continue to give us your help by following our advice right up to the day when we shall be authorized to appeal for your active help."

U.S. Forces Hit Japanese Base On Makin Isle

It is expected in a direct line between the Solomons and Hawaii.

Admiral Nimitz's communique indicated the raid caught the Japs so completely by surprise that they added to their own losses by bombing their own aircraft with bombers from nearby bases.

The communique gave this detail of losses inflicted before the U.S. force withdrew:

EIGHTY JAPS KILLED

"Known enemy losses inflicted by the Marines are at least 80 Japanese killed, radio installations and stores destroyed and one large and one small seaplane destroyed on the water. Other losses were inflicted on enemy forces by heavy bombing attacks of their own aircraft from other bases, which were attempting to assist them.

"Ships of our expedition gunned and sank one small transport and one gunboat."

The communique said that "considering the nature of this operation, our force suffered only moderate losses."

Purpose of the action seemingly was to neutralize bases developed by the Japanese in the British-owned Gilbert Islands after a United States naval-air raid on the island last February.

Makin Island is about 300 miles south of the long-developed Japanese base at Jaluit, in the Japanese-owned Marshall Islands.

A few hundred miles north of Jaluit are Taroa and Wotje, strong Japanese bases which were blasted, together with Jaluit, last February.

Makin Island, an atoll 16 miles long, also was hit during the February raid, and a Japanese supply ship and enemy planes were destroyed there.

SURPRISE BLOW

The surprise blow on Makin Island apparently is another indication that a campaign of stepping stones is under way and the Allied offensive against the Japanese in the Pacific is to be a continuous one.

There are some 1,000 islands involved in the Japanese-held areas of the western Pacific, including the islands held by the Japanese under mandate following the First Great War.

The battle line of the Pacific on which Admiral Nimitz is directing his striking forces is 7,000 miles long, and American units apparently now are on an offensive to keep the Japanese guessing as to where the next attack will come.

Maj. James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son who was listed as a participant in a commando-type raid of United States forces on Makin in the Japanese-held Gilbert Islands group, has been in the army corps officer since 1936 and on active duty since November, 1940.

The Gilbert Islands, a group of 20 or more small dots of land on the Pacific, lie athwart the equator almost on a direct line between Hawaii and Australia.

Since the Solomon Islands also are near this direct line, the current action suggests American forces are taking further steps to clear the sea lanes to Australia.

The Gilberts, under British protection since 1915, once were considered strategic with reference to the establishment of trans-Pacific air lines to Australia.

Before the war spread to the fabulous islands of the Southwest Pacific, the Solomon Islands were of interest principally to anthropologists and copra traders.

Capt. Andrew Cheyne, master of the British brig Naiad which put into Solomons frequently between 1844 and 1847 for water, vegetables and provisions, wrote: "Nothing can be said in favor of the Solomon Islanders. They are without exception the most treacherous and bloodthirsty race in the Western Pacific."

Not without cause were the islanders rough on early settlers, principally British. First discovered in 1567 by a Spanish adventurer who spent six months there, the islands were "lost" for nearly 200 years. They were rediscovered in 1768 by Bougainville, French explorer for whom an island is named, and civilization came to the Solomons.

Early in the 19th century plantation owners on other southern islands sent "blackbirding" expeditions to the Solomons to shanghai the fuzzy-haired, black natives for forced labor.

The islanders naturally objected, and having been civilized to the use of firearms, proceeded to file their protests forcibly. And to such good effect that one British trader said not a cove or bay of the Solomons but had its own tragedy of white men murdered and ships sunk.

As late as 1845 when a French bishop led a missionary expedition to Malaita Island, the bishop was killed and the missionaries driven away. Since 1893 when the British Protectorate was declared over most of the islands, the natives have slowly been persuaded to modify their primitive and in many sections cannibalistic and headhunting habits. Church of England and other evangelical missionaries have recruited many tribesmen to Christianity. Until World War I Germany owned part of the Solomons, subsequently turned over to Australia.

The tropical islands are hot and humid but not quite as steamy as other such islands, probably because of the way the monsoons hit the islands and their high mountain ranges. The interiors are heavy jungles through which occasional paths tunnel.

There are no roads save the paths on Tulagi, the British capital, and a bit of Occidental homelife around the court house, hotel and radio station on the two-mile long island with the best harbor in the Southwest Pacific.

Communications are maintained by tribal drums beating out messages from village to village, and by coastal boats.

Most of the men now work in the copra plantations on their own or nearby islands, drying cocoanut meat at voluntary labor. An incentive for their labor is the five-shilling head tax; the only way they and their civilized brethren across the seas can get cash to satisfy the tax collector is to work for it.

Before they were so modernized, the women raised vegetables in domestic gardens surrounded by lush jungle foliage and brilliant flowers, while the men raised pigs and did the heavy work around the house.

The bush people still swap their inland products for fish brought to community markets by saltwater people, residents of inlets along the shore.

Hian Hogbin, English anthropologist who lived with the Malaita Island natives for about two years, reports they had even in their primitive society involved social and economic systems, with closely integrated family relationships. "Headmen" even now execute tribal justice while the white man's officers administer the higher realms of justice.

On Malaita alone Hogbin found seven distinct languages with many variable dialects. From island to island the legal and tribal standards vary as well as the exotic tropical fruits, the dazzling colors of the cockatoos, parrots and other jungle birds.

Before they brought the current war to the Solomon Islands, the white men brought many of their diseases which helped reduce the population of the children-loving Melanesians. Less than 150,000 of them now are believed to occupy the 900-mile long double chain of 10 large and many small islands heavy foliage and high mountains stand out sharply to Yankee bombardiers flying in from the Southwest Pacific—Paul J. C. Friedlander.

Plan Stagger Railway Hours In Near Future

Staggering of hours on Edmonton's street railway system will have to be faced this fall, City Commissioner R. J. Gibb, in charge of utilities, stated on Saturday. He added that negotiations will be undertaken immediately with certain employers seeking their co-operation in the solution of the problem of fall and winter traffic on the street railway system.

Mr. Gibb said the problem was steadily becoming acute and many cars, during the peak load hours, were forced to "pass-up passengers, it being impossible to accommodate them.

The hours to be staggered in Edmonton, according to Mr. Gibb, will be the time between 8:00 a.m. and 9 a.m. and between 5 and 6 p.m.

He said that transportation and civic officials in all western cities had been communicated with concerning transportation plans being adopted for the fall and winter seasons, and also eastern cities where staggered hours are now in operation.

Mr. Gibb said that everything possible will be done in the staggering of hours to prevent any serious dislocation of business.

Albertans With New R.A.F. Unit

By LOUIS HUNTER

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 22.—(CP)—There's a new R.A.F. Coastal Command squadron that's almost more Canadian than British. Some were trained for night bombing. And, in the words of 21-year-old Sgt. J. D. Interpreting War News

Nazis in a single day lost possibly a third or even more of their operational aircraft in the west.

Inasmuch as the eastern front is the most logical ready source of reinforcement, the joint declaration made two months ago by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill that coming operations will divert German strength from the attack on Russia" suddenly takes on fresh significance.

NEXT MOVE GUESSWORK

What's next in Europe is, of course, a matter of further guesswork as the second-front question. The latest trend of events, however, jibes with a theory which is taking form in the minds of some exceptionally well-informed observers. In outline the thought is: The Nazis have been able to blast their way forward in the Caucasus largely by virtue of tremendous aerial superiority over the Red army, built up at the expense of the western Europe air defences.

Even this advantage has been found insufficient to effect the destruction of Marshal Timoshenko's armies, though it has brought within sight the conquest of the North Caucasus and control of the Black Sea.

Now, either from choice or necessity, Hitler very likely plans to go on the strategical defensive in Russia for the winter thereby releasing vast manpower and permitting diversion of the bulk of his air forces to western Europe and the Middle East.

THREAT FROM AIR

In the west, the first urgent necessity the Nazis face is the threat from increasing British and American aerial strength. It can be met by diversions from the Russian front, and also by stepping up German aircraft production by returning to German industry this winter some of the skilled manpower now in the armed forces.

In challenging for control of the skies over northern France, the Nazis retain the advantage they won two years ago at Dunkerque. "Air fees" bases are concentrated within the relatively small area of the British Isles, whereas the Germans can strike from numerous widely-scattered fields in western Europe.

If Hitler does not have any such intent as suggested here, he had better hurry. As noted this month by Lt.-Gen. Henry H. Arnold, United States Army Air Force chief, American planes are flowing to England in large numbers.

Isley Flays Attackers of Fiscal Policy

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—(CP)—People who have been damaging the war effort and the country's finances by spreading malicious falsehoods about government fiscal policies "are liars, falsifiers and saboteurs," Finance Minister Ilsley said here yesterday. Mr. Ilsley spoke at a meeting of the national war finance committee at which prominent Labor representatives were present.

These people have spread the belief that the government is about to freeze savings and might not redeem bonds and other securities, he said.

"They have said that the government would not redeem War Savings certificates that bank deposits would be frozen and that 25 per cent of all savings would be taken by the government.

OBLIGATIONS HONORED

"The Dominion government has always honored its obligations and now has a greater incentive than ever before to do so because of the large number of Canadian bondholders."

Mr. Ilsley said the present interest charge of the country's debt was about $175,000,000. Compared with this, a revenue figure of $2,000,000,000 gave an idea of the country's wealth and its ability to pay its obligations.

Reviewing the general war situation, the finance minister said the situation in Russia was not too bright, and should that country fall, it would be a great threat to Great Britain, and subsequently, to this country.

Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell also addressed the gathering. He said that in the period from 1914-19, the cost-of-living increased by 90 per cent. In this war period there was actually an advantage in cost-of-living prices of 17 per cent over those prevailing in the last war.

He asked the co-operation of Canadian labor in bringing home this message to the workers that if price control were to get out of hand, "awful confusion" would result.

Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec said that both Mr. Ilsley and Mr. Mitchell had given good lessons in patriotism. He asked the labor leaders to have confidence in the government and to demonstrate this confidence by increased war savings.

PROGRESS AFTER WAR

Canada will march toward progress after the war, he said, because of the war savings made today. Every Canadian, no matter what his racial origin, is responsible for the future of the country, and should subscribe to savings.

"We have in Ottawa, a government which has successfully carried out its war program during the past three years," he said. "That government deserves our support."

"Those who are under fire expect us at home to do our part by aiding those who are organizing national defence."

The premier ended his address by thanking the members of the war finance committee for making the various campaigns in the province successful.

Casualty Lists On Dieppe Raid Are Released

ally reported dead and missing since the start of the war. That figure includes only a few of the men lost at Hong Kong since sufficient information has not been available yet to issue a complete casualty list for that operation.

Complete lists of casualties announced to date will be found on Page 20.

R.H.L.I. HAS MANY

The City of Hamilton, represented in the Dieppe battle by the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, was more heavily represented in today's list—as it was last night—than any other centre. Six of the wounded and four missing, all five were from Hamilton. The home addresses of other men listed were scattered over the country.

Today's lists contained 71 names but one was an entry for a man listed among the first Dieppe casualties made public last night.

Two men reported missing last night also were included again in the second list this morning.

A third list of Dieppe casualties is expected to be issued sometime late today.

Officers on this morning's list included one lieutenant-colonel killed and one missing; one major killed, one wounded and two missing; five captains killed, one wounded and three missing; and six lieutenants killed, three wounded and three missing.

C.O.R. HAS MANY

The Central Ontario Regiment, the only official unit designation given casualties from the Central Ontario district in which the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry and the Royal Regiment of Toronto are included, was heavily represented on the list with 12 killed, 13 wounded and six missing, all ranks.

The Western Ontario Regiment, represented in the fight by the Essex Scottish, had one killed, one wounded and four missing, all ranks.

The Saskatchewan regiment represented by the South Saskatchewan Regiment, had five killed and three wounded. The Quebec Regiment, whose Black Watch was in the fighting, had seven wounded.

Le Regiment De Quebec, containing French-speaking Quebec units the Fusiliers Mont Carmel were in some of the hardest fighting—had four wounded on the list.

One artilleryman was reported killed while the Royal Canadian Engineers had two killed and four wounded. The Armored Corps, represented by the Calgary Tank Battalion, had one man on the list of wounded and the Canadian Provost Corps had three on the missing list.

Fusiliers' Unit Sarcee Camp Training Hard

Officers and men of the 3rd Battalion Edmonton Fusiliers, (M.A.), are going strong, having settled down to a hard, steady schedule of training at Sarcee Camp. The unit, under the command of Lt.-Col. H. B. Jamieson of this city, now has a strength of about 200, and is steadily being reinforced from Edmonton district depot.

This was the word brought back from the south by Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., E.D., area commandant, who has returned from Calgary after a two-day conference at M.D. headquarters on military affairs.

"The Fusiliers are looking like veteran soldiers already," Lt.-Col. Brown stated. Many of the officers of the unit are away taking courses.

He expressed keen interest in the great action by the Canadians against Dieppe.

KNEW OF TASK

Having passed through many of the fiercest engagements of the First Great War, Lt.-Col. Brown has a good idea what the boys of the 1942 Canadian army faced in the landing at Dieppe.

He expressed great regret at the severe losses suffered by the Canadians, and observed that an exceptionally heavy loss in officers could be expected.

"But we must expect heavy losses in that kind of an action," he said.

Military Honors To Dieppe Fallen

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(CP)—The Paris radio said yesterday that all officers and men of the United Nations' forces killed in the attack on Dieppe Wednesday have been buried with full military honors.

James Conley was sentenced to four months at hard labor when he pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication. This was the third conviction against Conley on a similar charge. He appeared in city police court on Friday afternoon. One "drunk" was fined the minimum fee of $20 and costs or 30 days.

Charles T. Hawkins Dies at 41 Years

The death took place in a city hospital Friday of Charles Tedford Hawkins. He had been ill for some time. He was 41 years old.

He was employed by the Edmonton Paint and Glass Company. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hawkins, are old-timers here.

He is survived by his wife, Dorothy, his mother and father, one daughter, Iris, and one son, Michael, all of Edmonton; three sisters, Mrs. C. N. Martin of Edmonton, Mrs. Alfred Algiers of Tacoma, Wash., and Mrs. Harry Drysdale, of Owl's Eye, Alberta.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 2 p.m. from Andrews Brothers Funeral Chapel. Burial will be in the Edmonton cemetery.

British Grab Off 14 Danish Ships

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(CP)—The Admiralty announced today that 14 Danish fishing vessels had been seized and moved into British ports. Denmark is German-occupied. The admiralty communique said the seizures were in line with a standing issued last month that vessels proceeding outside coastal waters in the North Sea would do so at their own risk and peril.

Western Canada Units Push Farthest Inland in Blaze Of Glory on Dieppe Raid

holding perimeter there. A large number of Camerons went up the right bank of the Scie river, smashing into pockets of enemy resistance and killing scores of Germans.

Another group of Camerons struck up the left bank of the river, and a third section joined the South Saskatchewan forces southwest of Pourville. They remained with them throughout a strong attack by a German battalion which they held off.

CAMERONS PUSH ON

The Germans harried the Camerons with mortar and artillery fire from a mile or so away, but the Winnipeggers never stopped their forward push until they reached a bridge spanning the Scie 3½ miles from the coast.

Their advance was blocked at this point by a heavy concentration of German guns and after a lengthy action, they withdrew for the general re-embarkation.

At one point the Camerons met a German field battery moving along a road preparing to go into action. The guns were drawn by horses and the Camerons "beat up" the battery.

Maj. A. T. Law of Winnipeg was acting commanding officer ashore and he returned to England. Another major who went through the battle and returned was Norman Ross, another Winnipegger.

DEADLY SNIPING

There were scores of individual acts of heroism but one man all the Camerons are talking about is Pte. Alex Huppe of Winnipeg. He went with the forces pushing inland and re-embarked safely after doing a superb sniping job with his rifle all the way.

An officer said "Huppe was like a kid on the midway shooting up targets with a .22."

He hid behind trees—behind anything that would conceal him —and picked off the helmeted grey forms trying to halt the advancing Canadians. He prowled around as stealthily as an Indian and accounted for a number of German infantrymen.

Huppe himself dismissed his action with a shrug of the shoulders. "All the Germans we could see we bumped off with pleasure," he said.

The Camerons lavished their praise, too, on the regimental padre, apt. J. P. Brown of Winnipeg and Dauphin, Man., who went ashore as a medical sergeant in a regimental aid post. In the heat of action he worked on the wounded and carried stretchers for hours on end through German machine-gun fire.

Capt. Ben Brackman of Regina, a medical officer, also was highly praised for his excellent work on the injured.

NO MAN FAILED

Cpl. Freddy Sutherland, captain of the Camerons hockey team which won the Canadian army championship last winter, summed up the bravery of his mates with the assertion: "I never saw anyone back down anywhere."

The Camerons didn't seem to have any nerves at all. They just kept plowing ahead and plowing ahead. At one point 30 men under Capt. E. P. Thompson of Winnipeg were cut off by machine-gun fire three miles from the coast and without faltering battled their way out of the trap and ran the gauntlet of German fire back to the coast.

The heroism of the Camerons was so outstanding that Lieut. E. D. McManus of Winnipeg, who was with the forces going up the left bank of the river, said "You can hardly pick out any individual who did any better than any other."

"Every man was a superb soldier all the way. There was never the slightest indication of fear."

FIRST SCALP

The first man of the Camerons to kill a German was Pte. A. E. Buchanan of Winnipeg, who saw a Nazi in an orchard by the beach and brought him down in short order.

CSM. Charlie McLellan of Winnipeg was with a company that probably saw more action than any other. A veteran of the last war, when he served in the Seaforths and Argylls of the British army, he spoke words of encouragement to his men and was an outstanding example of coolness under fire, especially on the beach where the going was particularly tough.

The section which reached farthest inland was led by L/Cpl. Stan Thomas of Neepawa, Man., and the men who came back with him were Pte. C. N. Bailey, Vancouver, Pte. L. W. Hallett, Fisher Branch, Man., and Pte. Hal Hutton, Minnedosa, Man. They were among those who helped blast up the German battery on the road.

Hutton was the proudest man in the Camerons. A couple of miles from the coast he captured a 18-year-old German and brought him all the way back to the beach. He made the youth carry Cameron wounded aboard the boats on stretchers.

MOST SUCCESSFUL

Units of the South Saskatchewan Regiment were the most successful of the Canadian groups which raided Dieppe. They were led by a gallant young colonel who flouted danger and inspired everyone in his formations.

The westerners made a dawn landing at Pourville last Wednesday, two miles west of Dieppe, attacked their objective, captured a number of prisoners, and one company with some of the Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg held off a German battalion during the re-embarkation.

To a man members of the regiment paid the highest tribute to the commanding officer, Lt.-Col. Cecil Merrit of Vancouver.

Several times in the heat of action he personally led detachments of three or four men to defend machine-gun posts that were holding up the show.

Under his direction his men pushed inland more than a mile and hunted down Germans all over the Pourville area.

LAST TO LEAVE

When the detachments re-embarked at 11 a.m., he stood by the seawall as the Nazis on the headland peppered the beach with lead and quietly waved his men through to the boats.

Under heavy fire he crouched by a field wireless set keeping in communication with headquarters and passing on latest information as the enemy approached.

In their camp in southern England some officers who came back told me the story of the South Saskatchewan regiment in fighting in France, the fury of which I saw for myself as a correspondent with the landing force.

WESTERNERS WORK FAST

The Saskatchewan troops landed at 5 a.m. right at Pourville. They were the first Canadians ashore and scrambled over a 30-foot seawall and immediately occupied a section of the town. Detachments went through buildings cleaning out Germans.

One company pushed southwest of Pourville and smashed Nazi transport sheds and gun positions and later this same company with a platoon and a half of Camerons [illegible] by a wiped German battalion that came up from the south. This action lasted two hours.

Headquarters was established in the town which was constantly under fire from German mortars and artillery one mile to the south-east. Nazi machine guns on the headlands kept firing down the main street.

CHARLIE CLEANS UP

A company attacked down the road leading inland in a southeast direction and was stopped by fire from a pillbox a few hundred yards outside the town. A platoon took cover behind a road block 20 yards from the pillbox from which the Germans were firing.

Pte. Charlie Sawben of Consul, Sask., looked over the situation and told Cpl. Charles Devlin of Lucky Lake, Sask.: "If somebody will hold my rifle I'll knock hell out of those guys."

He slipped forward from cover of the road block with Nazis pegging shots at him all the time, made the pillbox and chucked a hand grenade through one of the firing slits. "We didn't stop to see how many Charlie killed in there but firing certainly stopped," Devlin said.

Later, as Devlin led a section in an attack on some inland guns Sawden had his leg broken by a Nazi bullet.

"We carried him down into a hollow and used our bayonets as splints to fix up his leg," said Devlin. "Then we went on to make another attack. Charlie was picked up on the way back. He's in hospital in England now and doing okay."

COLONEL WIPES 'EM OUT

In mid-morning a machine-gun post on a cliff top caused the Westerners some trouble and Col. Merritt attacked it with a sergeant and two men.

"We crawled up on the cliff behind the colonel and me and the other guy covered the pillbox with a Bren gun," said Pte Les. Russell of Weyburn. "The colonel and the sergeant went forward and wrecked the pillbox with grenades."

Lieut. Buchanan said that when the colonel came back to the unit's headquarters he told him with a boyish grin. "I just bombed out a pillbox; try it some time before breakfast. I recommend it."

NAZI TREACHERY

The South Saskatchewans had a tragic experience with Nazi treachery. A detachment surrounded a machine-gun post and the Germans waved a white flag. The Canadians advanced to take some prisoners and the Nazis opened fire, immediately killing all of them.

"We now know the truth of the statement there is only one good German and that's a dead one," said Lieut. Buchanan.

Units of the South Saskatchewans had a rocky time on their withdrawal when the Nazis closed in and machine-gunned them from high points. The tide was running and the boats couldn't get in closer than 150 yards, forcing the Canadians to walk or swim out to them.

HEROIC STRETCHER MEN

The heroes in the eyes of the men participating in the assault were stretcher bearers. "They did wonderful work looking after the wounded and getting them to the boats," said Lieut. Dickin. "They carried men through water up to their necks time and again and came back for more."

The Germans captured were all eastern-front veterans and Dickin said they were "young men grown old."

"They were cynical, tired and fed up with war," he added.

Moscow Asserts Big Allied Drive Being Prepared

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(CP)—The Moscow radio, in a broadcast directed to Germany and heard by Reuters, said last night that "a great United Nations offensive against Germany is now being prepared."

"The latest air raids on German cities in the east and west as well as the raid by British-American forces on the French coast are but preparations for further offensive operations," the announcer was quoted as saying.

As a salutation, some African tribesmen crack their finger joints.

Air Cadets To Resume Drills: Seek Recruits

With regular training sessions to be resumed soon after summer holidays for No. 12 Edmonton Squadron of the Air Cadets of Canada, it is pointed out by officers of the organization that only those who desire to eventually enlist in the R.C.A.F. should enrol.

Cadet Sqdn. Ldr. Colin D. MacKenzie, officer commanding No. 12 Edmonton Squadron, in announcing the opening of the fall training term, stresses the fact that the training received in the air cadets is largely wasted if the cadets do not go to the air force when they are eligible to join up.

No cadet is, however, required to state his intention of joining the air force when he enlists.

ATTENDED CAMP

During the summer most of the cadets of this squadron attended summer camp, at flying schools at Penhold and Macleod, and are now ready for the more advanced training that will be given, during their second year.

The second, or junior squadron, is in process of formation. This junior squadron will receive the same training that the Edmonton cadets have received during the past year.

There are many names on the waiting list for entry into the squadron, and these will have preference in recruiting.

All those who wish to apply for enrolment, may report at No. 4 I.T.S. drill hall, Tuesday evening, Aug. 25, at 7.15 and application forms and instructions will be given them. Recruiting will also be carried on Thursday, Aug. 27, at the same time and any subsequent Tuesday or Thursday in the month of September.

HARVEST LEAVE

It is possible that many present air cadets and many prospective air cadets, will wish to co-operate in the matter of harvesting, and the unit is very anxious to co-operate in this vital effort. Any present cadet and any new cadet who is enrolled, will, if he desires it, be given leave of absence for harvesting upon the submission of a written request. The syllabus of training for September will be laid out in such a way that those cadets who do not attend parades and lectures because of harvest work, will have an opportunity of catching up very easily.

Prospective candidates for enrolment, in the Air Cadets, must keep in mind that they will have to pass a medical examination, and that they must be 15 and under 18 years of age at the present time. They must be over 5 ft. 1 in. and under 6 ft. in height. If they are 15 years of age, they must during the coming year be attending at least grade 9, and if 16 years of age, attending at least grade 10. If cadets who are within the proper age limit are not attending school, they must have completed at least grade 9.

It is most important that only those who desire to attend every parade, and every lecture, and who wish to work hard to acquire a knowledge of air force requirements, present themselves for enlistment.

Senior squadrons of Air Cadets will have their first parade of the season, Wednesday evening, September 9, at 19:15 hours.

Woman Finds Money: Takes It to Police

A rarity in the annals of loss recoveries was recorded at the city police station Friday when a woman walked up to the desk sergeant with a wallet of money she had found on the sidewalk.

Mrs. E. A. Atkinson, 56 Albert trail, stated she found a purse containing $33 in cash and identification cards on the sidewalk near the premises of the Cockshutt Plow Co.

Only a few moments previously Alfred Henry, Legal, reported at the station that he lost the wallet. City police commended Mrs. Atkinson's honesty and stated that rarely is a wallet returned intact.

Independents Plan For By-Election

Organization work in support of John F. Lymburn K.C., Independent party nominee in the Edmonton by-election, will start immediately, and campaign offices will be opened next week, it was decided Friday evening at a meeting of the Independent Citizens' Association of Alberta.

Mr. Lymburn and Alfred Speakman, M.L.A., for Red Deer, and house leader of the party, attended.

A meeting of the general executive of the party will be held on Monday at the campaign offices at 5 p.m., and those wishing to assist in the campaign are invited to attend the meeting.

Mercury Descends To 37 Above Mark

Edmontonians were treated to a preview of fall weather Friday when the temperature dropped to 37 degrees above zero, the lowest it has been since the heavy May frost that killed many leaves and plants.

Besides being cold citizens again witnessed a real fog or mist.

What's Wrong With Profits?

The C.C.F. demand for "total conscription of wealth" in Canada has set loose a good deal of nonsensical and even mischievous talk about the evils of profits.

This flood of socialistic speculation is, of course, mere political opportunism, the C.C.F. being convinced that the public passion for financial sacrifice, always a phenomenon of wartime, can be converted through hysteria into a permanent political philosophy.

The movement is as unsound as it is iniquitous. We do not believe that many Canadians will doubt the reality of the conscription of wealth, even under the present system, after the first payday in September.

This attack on the system of profits is not only unrealistic but erroneous in principle. It is based, philosophically, on premises that experience has shown to be false, on such shibboleths as "all men are equal" and on such un-Christian doctrines as the complete subjugation of the individual to the state.

An attack on the system of controlled profits is an attack on human individuality and upon those postulates of democracy of which socialism is the complete antithesis.

A highly useful debate, in this connection, has been proceeding in Britain and Australia on what is called the profit motive. It is useful because it brings common sense to bear on a plain, everyday subject that could easily be clouded with the vapors of perverted war hysteria—steamed up by political doctrinaires.

As the argument in Britain shows—and has been demonstrated by government policy in Australia—profits are the normal and inevitable motive power of all business.

Russia has tackled the problem without traditions or inhibitions. But even in Russia, every man seeks private profits in the form of higher wages than his fellows. The entire object of work is profit in one form or another. To assume the existence of a society without profits is to assume a society of seraphim without appetites.

While the profit motive is a normal and respectable one, it is obvious that some profits are excessive and unearned. These can be controlled by taxation. And never before, in the history of democracy, have they been so drastically controlled as now—to the point of virtual confiscation.

But like profits, like anything, else can lead to evil practices, it is absurd to reason that profits are inherently evil and should be abolished. Australia's experience is valuable there. In that country, the Labor government, which leans far to the Left, proposed to limit profits to 4 per cent, but after surveying the effects of the plan in demoralizing business, rapidly abandoned it.

In announcing that this program would not work, would disorganize the national economy and reduce production, Premier Curtin had these commonsense words to say:

"While it is impossible to conduct total war without large state control of industry, neither Australia nor Britain has interfered with industry because of preconceived political notions. All that is being done is to place national requirements ahead of either socialist or capitalist theories. Insofar as capital will serve, it will be used. Insofar as a greater degree of national control is necessary, it, too, will be used."

There is the only intelligent approach to the problem, to do everything that will increase production, to do nothing that will reduce production for the sake of a theory.

People are content to have their profits limited drastically or even confiscated altogether, as is now the case, in the emergency of war.

Those socialists who would perpetuate that situation on the specious theory that all profits are evil, would merely carry the economic agonies of wartime unnecessarily over into the times of peace.

Socialistic doctrinaires constitute one of our greatest political dangers. They would make the sacrifices of war and the wartime deification of the state a normal rule for normal living.

Nothing would produce more economic chaos, a more sudden drop in production or a greater damage to our war effort.

The true purpose of all monetary and social reform is not to put the individual in bondage to the state, but to emphasize and secure the inherent dignity and unique worth of the individual human soul.

More Wanted, Not Fewer

Under the revised agreement, Britain is to supply 40 per cent of the recruits for training in the Commonwealth Air Training Schools in Canada, Australia and New Zealand will supply 60 per cent. Under the original plan Canada provided 80 per cent of the recruits, and the other three countries 20 per cent. That was in the formative stage, when the facilities for training were limited and the possible number of trainees comparatively small.

The new schedule does not mean that there will be fewer Canadian recruits, but that there will be more from Britain. The training machinery is working up toward full capacity. At the same time fewer and fewer British airfields can be spared for training purposes. They are needed now as bases for the fleets which go over daily and nightly to bomb the many and the occupied countries. Britain must therefore depend more and more on Canada to train its fliers.

But there is no danger that this will set limits to the number of Canadian boys who can be taken on at the schools. The training system has been planned as a flexible one, and the facilities can be expanded as required. Young Canadians need not therefore fear that the new quota arrangement will cut down their chance of getting "wings."

Thousands of new airmen will be needed every month to man the new machines which are being turned out in ever growing numbers. And there are no better fliers in the world than those who come from Canadian homes.

Anyway, the new method of collecting income taxes changes the problem. The wage-earner now does not have to figure out how much income tax he has to pay. All he has to do is to find out how much of his wages he is not going to get after the several deductions of one kind and another are made by the employer for the Dominion government.

Three men have been condemned to death at Clermont-Ferrand because they objected to Vichy's policy of "collaboration." Czarism in old Russia was no more intolerant, and no more brutal, than the czarism that has been set up by Vichy.

Calgary Herald: The Winnipeg Free Press covers with a column editorial denouncing Calgary people for their treatment of the Chinese and leaving the impression that Chinese would be received with open arms in Winnipeg. A day or two later the Free Press published a Calgary telegram stating that the Chinamen were leaving for Winnipeg and gave it the heading: "We Don't Want Them." A similar telegram in the Winnipeg Tribune is headed: "We do not wish to invite them." As ever, it is distance that lends enchantment to the view.

Under the new part of the Dominion vote it is to be expended as the Assembly may see fit and there is consequently the direct inducement to save. The less necessary for the more necessary objects.

Arthur Slaght Gives the House a Lesson on Money

From HANSARD, JULY 15, 1942

ARTHUR SLAGHT: In the appendix to the budget, at page 56, it is shown that we borrowed in the two years and five months of war, $3,933,508,690, of which more than $10,000,000 was non-interest bearing or something else. Therefore the net borrowing on which we took on a new interest burden amounted to, roughly, $3,922,000,000, and we used $1,503,000,000 of that to redeem maturing bonds so that we created new interest - bearing debt for spending purposes—and we certainly spent it—amounting to, roughly, $2,418,000,000. It is interesting to note that of those amounts we borrowed from the chartered banks $600,600,000 and they have the bonds with the interest coupons; we borrowed from the Bank of Canada $664,340,000, or a total from those two sources of $1,265,000,000.

Let me give the story for the last fiscal year. We borrowed $2,657,000,000, of which $4,000,000 was by means of non-interest bearing certificates. Therefore we borrowed at interest $2,452,000,000, and of that we used last year $984,000,000 to redeem maturing bonds, so we created new interest-bearing debt and spending money amounting to $1,468,000,000. Our projected budget this year is $3,900,000,000. About half of that, or $2,049,000,000, it is proposed to raise by taxes, and the minister in his statement says of the item we are now discussing and other items says that this leaves a budgetary deficit of $1,850,000,000 which will have to be covered by borrowing.

I have examined our maturing obligations for the coming fiscal year for which we are budgeting. They amount to only $595,000,000. I propose to the hon. minister that any additional sum that he has to get to cover the loss under the two or three items I have mentioned under item 1 he should get in this way: he should issue at least $1,200,000,000 of national currency.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): How would the hon. member make that jibe with the policy of the administration a month ago?

Mr. SLAGHT: I will answer that. I expected that some hon. member would rise in a hurry and say that that would cause inflation.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): I am not asking the question in that sense at all. I am asking for information. Before I returned to the house this evening, I suggested to the deputy minister of finance that we should have a meeting.

Mr. SLAGHT: Well, the hon. leader of the opposition saw the light; he saw the folly of what we have been doing in recent years sooner than I did. I compliment him.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): Unfortunately, I met with no encouragement, and I dropped the matter, on the theory that I was wrong. I apologize for interrupting.

Mr. SLAGHT: My hon. friend may change his mind back again. I will try to change it for him. My hon. friend says, "Oh, that will create inflation." There are others who will probably put it much more succinctly than I do. My hon. friend is putting it. If by inflation we mean you are going to cheapen our present currency, I oppose that because you issue more national currency. I let me suggest that that dog won't bark; that that will not kill. I will tell the committee why. I am saying, let us issue bonds for the $595,000,000 that will be required because those will be brought to the minister by the insurance companies, pension funds, trust funds, who represent a large number of clients, and they will expect, not to get cash for it, but to get two per cent bonds, as they have been getting for the last twenty years, which bonds will be interest-free, that is the way in which the government will maintain its obligations. So I would propose that for the rest of war time the reissue of $595,000,000.

I shall try to illustrate to my hon. friend by an actual visible illustration if this country will create any inflation at all, the reason being that we now control all expenditure in this country. We control prices against rising. We have a food controller, an oil controller. In fact we control every commodity there is except the air we breathe. We control prices of all commodities, and we control wages. That is something that the hon. minister said in effect in 1939—I can give the page—that if you can control the selling of prices so that if you issue more national currency there will not be an immediate spiraling up of prices, then there is not danger of inflation by the issue of further national currency in the same way as there would be otherwise.

Mr. ILSLEY: When did I say that?

Mr. SLAGHT: As reported at page 130 of Hansard for 1939, the second committee that I was under the minister put it in this way. He was dealing with this question with which I am dealing, and he said with regard to inflation:

If it is replied that we should control prices rigidly, then, assuming that all the necessary and such conditions could be effectively controlled—a very optimistic assumption—we would have to prevent the public from spending its money by some other means such as a drastic system of rationing all commodities.

We are now in the very midst of the most drastic system of rationing all commodities that this country has ever known. It is working. The minister then displayed a lack of confidence and I will be very perhaps right at the time. That system of rationing has, however, become a reality in this country. Everyone knows that we are rationing certain commodities and preparing to ration more, and the housewives and citizens of Canada are taking it with chins up, and obeying the rationing laws, because we are finding no necessity for prosecutions to make people observe them.

Let me now return to the question of inflation. By inflation is meant that you are putting too much cash in the hands of the people of this country, particularly the working people and the farmers, and the 85 per cent that are termed the very modest earners; you are giving them too much money, and they will go and spend it. Will any of my hon. friends tell me, because I have $100 bill in my hand—

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. SLAGHT: I had to borrow it, Mr. Chairman, and the public interest would not permit me to table it. The security back of this Bank of Canada currency is the credit and the assets of Canada. Then I have a $100 note here, with the pretty little coupons attached covering a period of years, with interest at three per cent payable half-yearly. The security behind this bond is the credit and the assets of the Dominion of Canada. There is no difference at all in what is behind either of these securities; and there is not a pennyworth of gold anywhere in the custody of the government today or in the custody of the Bank of Canada, behind either of these securities. Two years ago we gave up the requirement that we maintained up until then of 25 per cent gold before national currency could properly be issued against it. That day has gone, both with Britain and with us. But we have the credit of this country behind both these securities.

If, instead of issuing bonds, taking them to the bank, cashing them through the window and getting $100 bills for them, which the Minister of Finance would do if he issued bonds, he issued $100 bills; what does he do with the money? He pays the obligations of Canada. He pays the John Inglis Company for Bren guns, and they in turn pay out the money to their workmen. Similarly, if we issue this $1 bill and take it to the bank and deposit it—because we would not want to keep it in a strong box—we hand it to the banker. Then he has the $100 bill and we have the credit. Then we cheque against the same account, to the John Inglis Company and everybody else, and we meet the obligations of Canada in the same way. Now, How do the working people in Canada get any more money under the system of bonds than they get under the system of issuing bonds? They have to earn every dollar they get. The John Inglis Company or from anyone else. But someone gets a good deal more profit, and I think that we are going to follow. What does the private banker do, and by that I mean the ordinary banker? He, any hon. friend issues this bond and takes it to a bank: if that bank has only $10 in cash and deposit in the Bank of Canada, paper money, the bank then has power, because it has now delegated its credit to it, to thank him for the bond, take it in, put it away and make a book-keeping entry in a book to that effect, and ink showing that my hon. friend has a credit of $100 in the bank and he can draw it out over the next day, if he wishes, and draw it all out or leave it in. But the bank puts up, as against it, nothing, except for this. It does just one thing to get that bond: in the first place the bank has a $10 bill of the Bank of Canada, and perhaps it has to keep it there, but it does not even give up that bill. It simply makes a written entry in a book, because we have delegated the power to issue money to the banks, and the banks have delegated that power in the parliament of Canada, when: the British North American Act placed in the hands of the sections of that act here, but it will not be gainsaid that the power to create and regulate money is given under section 91 to the parliament of Canada. But we do not use that power. We delegated it years ago to the chartered banks, under our financial system.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): In 1939 we took in $5,866,000,000 in cash, and it will soon disappear.

Mr. SLAGHT: Oh, no; I will tell my hon. friend what happened in 1914 and the years after. All we did was to say to the chartered banks, who had enjoyed much prosperity, "Instead of keeping your own bank bills, that each year thereafter they had to decrease the amount of their issue four per cent. We did nothing else. We never stopped their writing entries in their books and creating money by credits of that kind. We never stopped their taking these bonds, keeping these interest coupons for twenty years, as the case might be, and fattening on this procedure. My hon friend may say something about the great debts that are being created. With dominion government bonds outstanding now amounting to $5,866,000,000, according to the budget, with provincial interest-bearing securities amounting to a large figure, and municipal securities, the public debt of Canada today amounts to $10,000,000,000. It is a terrible load; and the interest we are paying today on bonds of just the kind which are largely held by banks, trust companies, trust estates and the wealthy people of this country amounts to a total of as much as $170,000,000. If we issue the additional $1,850,000,000 of bonds which the minister says he proposes to raise by borrowing this year, we shall add to that amount of interest another $55,000,000, so that next year we shall be paying $225,000,000 in interest on debt created in the war. I have figured out for 20 years that yearly interest payment will amount to $2,250,000,000, which we shall have to raise by debt-bearing securities of the dominion government alone.

Can we stand that sort of thing, should we stand that sort of thing if there is another way of doing it? Surely I have shown that there is no more inflation in the way we have not given the working people of this country any more money to spend, because you give the bank this bond and let it have the interest for nothing, than when you issue this bill. It is nonsense to let anyone tell you otherwise. If that be so, what would be the harm in doing as I have suggested? Where is the evil in it? It should be glad to be shown. I think it is time we called a halt. I have just about concluded if my hon. friend is protesting.

Mr. SLAGHT: I am sorry; I thought my hon. friend was protesting. Lest anyone here should have any doubt about my interpretation of the law—though I am sometimes wrong in that—I should like to give an authority that possibly will not be questioned; I refer to Mr. Graham Towers. Before the standing committee on banking and commerce in 1939, at page 76 of volume 1 of the proceedings, the hon. member for Vancouver-Burrard was examining Mr. Graham Towers, and I might read half a dozen questions and answers in order to set any doubt at rest:

Mr. McGeer: Am I right in saying that a bank deposit can be created in this way? A banker can purchase a dominion government bond by accepting from the government, we will say, a bond for $1,000 and giving to the government a deposit in the bank of $1,000?

Mr. Towers: Yes.

Mr. McGeer: When a bank takes a bond from the government, what the government receives is a credit entry in the banker's book showing the banker as a debtor to the government to the value of $1,000?

Mr. Towers: Yes.

Mr. McGeer: And in law all that the bank has to hold in the way of assets to meet that deposit liability is 5 per cent?

Mr. Towers: Yes.

Mr. McGeer: You are aware that our banks now hold one billion four hundred odd million dollars of municipal, provincial and dominion securities?

Mr. Towers: Yes.

Does my hon. friend still suggest that that condition altered since 1939? I have made vigilant search and it has not. I think he was thinking of the issue of notes.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): I admit that.

Mr. SLAGHT: I have gone on much longer than I intended, Mr. Chairman. But let me show you what we have been doing under the system since 1939. This picture is a vivid one because I am speaking only of dominion bonds held by the chartered banks and municipal debts. In 1910 our dominion debt amounted to $341,000,000. In 1920, $1,035,000,000; in 1930, $2,261,000,000; in 1940, $4,062,000,000; and in 1942, as set out in the budget speech, $5,866,000,000. Where do we go from here?

Someone may suggest, "Oh, if you issue national currency you will have to give the workingman of this country pockets full of money." Does anyone suggest that under the workingman getting his paying his taxes under this budget he is going to have too much money to spend that he is going to be come reckless in his expenditures after paying these taxes. It is simply a written entry in a book, because we have delegated the power to issue money to the banks, and the banks have delegated that power in the parliament of Canada, when: the British North American Act placed in the hands of the sections of that act here, but it will not be gainsaid that the power to create and regulate money is given under section 91 to the parliament of Canada. SIDE GLANCES

By Galbraith

"I wouldn't put off buying these things too long—I have a hunch the priorities board is going to crack down on us popcorn men pretty soon!"

tribution. I am sorry I do not have them here, but I got them from the authorities. The minister of finance recognizes the problem of where the interest-bearing obligation is owned and held.

An hon. MEMBER: By the chartered banks.

Mr. SLAGHT: In large part, yes. Out of $3,922,000,000 of bonds issued, the chartered banks bought $1,254,000,000. But there is another way in which they do business. Anybody who wants to buy a bond can go to a bank and pay in $10, and the bank will advance the rest to buy a $100 bond for him.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): They will go 100 per cent sometimes.

Mr. SLAGHT: That is a very laudable thing to do. But just get the figures of Canadian bonds which the chartered banks are holding today. In the last victory loan the minister of finance, with the aid of all those men who rushed in to help him, got a wonderful distribution of the loan. I did not mention, in connection with the $55,000,000 of increased interest that it will cost us at least eight or ten millions more to get it, because that is the expense of raising victory loan money. Somebody objected last year to $8,000,000 as being too much. I do not think it is. But that is a part of the burden you have to carry if you go on the debt-issuing principle instead of the currency-issuing principle.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): Would the hon. member put any limitation on this method? What would be do with foreign obligations if our money became depreciated?

Mr. SLAGHT: If it became depreciated? If the country were blasted to pieces with a volcano, what would any of us do? Let my friend show me how this money will become depreciated. I am suggesting a national currency, which does not create debt, instead of debt-bearing obligations. Suppose a foreign country is looking at Canada's financial position and Canada's bookkeeping. Do you think that Great Britain or the United States will think less of Canada if she increases her national currency by $1,200,000,000 in one year, instead of increasing her national debt by $1,200,000,000 of bonds, plus $55,000,000 of interest-bearing coupons every year? If you were a country merchant and you were looking at a customer who had an account of a trifling $100 to pay at some time when his creditor pushed him, would his credit be any the less after he had an obligation of $100 at 3 per cent interest for twenty years, which would make his total debt $160, plus three times twenty, or a total of $160? There has been a lot of bogeyism about this matter and a lot of wellmeant nonsense.

There has been a lot of false premises; there has been a lot of unsupportable statements; but I challenge anyone to show me where there would be inflation by the same issue of national currency, if carefully each year you take care of your maturing bond obligations that mature in that fiscal year. We started off under a foolish policy, and we cannot ruin the insurance companies and the banks by shutting them off and giving them just cash when we require to renew our obligations as we do year after year; I want to protect them. When you have done what I suggest, and if I am right in saying that we have maintained control over prices, that we have maintained rationing of goods, then every proper reason that has ever been advanced before in Canada in support of this debt-increasing burden falls to the ground.

Mr. ILSLEY: Everyone familiar with the working of the banking system knows that the moment the banks get their hands on additional cash—I mean by that the Bank of Canada notes, or deposits by the Bank of Canada which are convertible into Bank of Canada notes—when the banks get those reserves in their hands practical forces are set in motion to get the banks to buy securities themselves, or to induce them themselves, so that the deposits of the chartered banks will be seven, eight, nine or ten times great as their cash reserves. That lies at the base of their whole profit-making activities: the way they make money is by lending more money than they have. What they have is their cash reserves; and unless a bank has out several times—six, seven, eight, nine or ten times—its cash reserves, it is not being profitably or from a banking point of view, properly conducted. Therefore, if the hon. gentleman has suggested, a billion dollars of new money, government money, Bank of Canada notes or deposits, and put those into circulation, we have set loose inflationary tendencies of terrific power. That is the reason why we keep away from borrowing from the Bank of Canada. We would borrow from the chartered banks before we would borrow from the Bank of Canada even though we had to pay a little interest to the chartered banks but not to the Bank of Canada, or if we did pay interest to the Bank of Canada we would be paying interest to ourselves. That is the reason for our borrowing from the people of Canada and, if we have to, even from the chartered banks, but not at all from the Bank of Canada if we can avoid it. My hon. friend says that is all right under normal conditions.

Mr. McGEER: I did not say that that was all right at any time.

Mr. ILSLEY: He is advocating the issue of a billion dollars of Bank of Canada notes; that is what he is advocating. I say that, whatever may be the situation normally, you have now a wartime prices and trade board, which will hold prices down, and you can put your money into circulation without forcing prices up because you have the price ceiling on. Well, my hon. friend has the most sublime faith in price ceilings. I wish I had as much faith in the price ceiling without that billion dollars as he has with that billion dollars.

Mr. HANSON (York-Sunbury): It would just blow up.

Mr. ILSLEY: I want to tell him that if we put into circulation a billion dollars of new money, it would blow the price ceiling to bloody smithereens. You could say "Jack Robinson", I say this too, that if by some miracle we were able to keep that price ceiling on we would have a black market for many, many years, because we would never dare take it off.

You can do only so much by bureaucratic methods. You can do only so much by repression, by policing. Our prosecutions are startling now. I see them in the papers: a prosecution, I think, in Winnipeg, another somewhere else. There was a prosecution in Montreal of a restaurant which charged too much for a meal. Black markets will undoubtedly develop. People will be violating our regulations, and there will be no way to stop it, to prevent that from happening. The only way we can preserve that price ceiling is to take away from the people by borrowing and taxation just as much as we possibly can, so as to relieve that upward pressure on the price ceiling and on prices. I want to say that anyone who thinks as against the $1,850,000,000 of new money, national currency, Bank of Canada notes, can be effected without inflation is simply deluding himself.

Co-Operation

From THE PENTICTON HERALD

There should not be, and happily there actually is not, any such thing as isolationism in the field of true science.

The sight here recently of several United States trucks, fitted out with busy radio sets, gave the appearance of knowing what they were doing, bears out the truth of the above statement. These trucks were from the United States department of agriculture and they were testing out the high co-operation being offered by our friends to the south in combatting the appearance of the apple psylla. This flying insect has come to the Oliver-Osoyoos area. If it stays, and multiplies as at present, it is a prime menace to our orchards, and also to those farther south. Hence the international character of remedial efforts.

The United States help, we need hardly emphasize, is not offered in any sense of sweet charity. It is a matter of plain common sense. The enemy, entomologically speaking, is being fought before it crosses the border. The pear psylla, like science, also knows no national code.

If only the isolationists in international politics could have been brought long since, to such a sensible attitude, we would today have much more time and energy to direct toward this type of thing.

Autumn Stock Show to Offer Fine Animals

With the prize list now out for the Edmonton fall show and sale of purebred livestock, breeder interest indicates that the event will be outstanding and on a much larger scale than heretofore. Indications are that a very large list of entries will be offered, representative of the flocks and herds of the leading raisers of purebred sheep and swine in northern Alberta.

The show and sale will be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, October 14, 15 and 16, at the sheep and swine barns, Edmonton Exhibition grounds, conducted by the Edmonton Exhibition Association with assistance and co-operation of the dominion and provincial departments of agriculture, the Alberta Provincial Sheep and Swine Breeders' Associations and the Northern Alberta Shorthorn Club.

An added feature of this year's show will be the auction sale of selected, registered shorthorn females under 6 years of age.

Alberta has already taken the leading place in Canada's hog production, and now, with the stepped up demand for Canadian bacon overseas as recently announced, the importance of securing high quality breeding stock is emphasized in the Canada-wide effort to produce a high percentage of "selects" in swine herds.

The commercial show and sale of finished stock will be held on Wednesday, October 14, starting at 3:30 p.m. The sale of registered shorthorn females will commence at 11:00 a.m. on Thursday, October 15, and followed by the sale of purebred swine at 1:30 p.m. The sale of purebred sheep will be on Friday, October 16, commencing at 10:00 a.m. All rams and boars are inspected and government graded and only high quality stock will be offered.

All farmers interested are requested to write for entry forms, sales catalogue and full information to the Edmonton Exhibition Association Ltd., 215 Alexandra Block, Edmonton, Alta.

HUNS ALL SET

Chance Clash in Channel Turned Fortunes of War Against Cannucks in Raid

By DOUGLAS AMARON

AT A CANADIAN ARMY HOSPITAL SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Aug. 22.—(CP)—The fortunes of war turned against the Canadians in the early hours of Wednesday morning and sent them into an inferno of bullets from the German defenders of Dieppe instead of against an enemy taken by surprise.

This was the impression of a score of wounded Canadians with whom I talked at this hospital where there are more than 100 less seriously wounded soldiers. Brought here for rest and care after their furious attack on the French port.

"They were waiting for us," was the comment prefacing account after account of the deadly artillery and machine-gun fire which swept across the landing craft even before the soldiers had time to disembark.

WAITING FOR DAYS

One unconfirmed report said a German prisoner had told his captors the Nazis had been waiting for days for the attack, but most of the Canadians were inclined to discount this claim.

A chance clash with a German convoy as the invasion fleet approached the French coast was accepted generally by the Canadians as reason why the assault did not take the Nazis by surprise.

"Certainly there are a lot more people over there than were expected, but even at that I think we gave them something," Lieut. Jack Halliday of Hamilton, Ont., said.

L. Cpl. Ronald Hancox of Winnipeg, who was with a headquarters defence platoon, said: "The Germans threw everything they had at us."

Wounded in one shoulder, Hancox was most impressed by the bravery of a first aid man who "worked like a demon" despite ceaseless fire from the German defences.

BEST MAN THERE

"He was the best man we had there," Hancox said, "and a lot of the boys can thank him they are still alive."

Tribute was paid to the navy.

One story of the navy's heroism was told by a Sergeant Suchard on the headquarters staff who twice went ashore in tank-landing craft.

The sergeant, whose story was passed on by other Canadians, said the captain of a landing craft was "blown off" the bridge and that a colonel aboard took his place.

Then the bridge was blown away and the colonel with it.

Another shell exploded in the engine room, killed the staff and damaged the steering gear. Soon the only men alive were the sergeant, one marine and two sailors. The marine went to the engine room and started the engines. The sailors kept lookout and shouted directions to the Canadian sergeant who relayed them to the marine who was steering the craft by its engines alone.

A Moose Jaw member of the South Saskatchewan Regiment, L. Cpl. Passmore, ashore for more than seventeen hours, saw some of the fiercest fighting and had the highest praise for his commanding officer.

COLONEL LED WAY

The Colonel led the way ashore "and seemed to be everywhere at the same time, giving orders, cheering the men on and helping them when they needed it."

A German mortar was causing trouble and the Colonel personally led an attack which silenced it.

Passmore was a member of a party which went 1½ miles inland to attack a German nest. The Canadians circled the nest and stormed it from the shelter of trees from the rear.

The German defenders were SS. (Elite) Guards who, Passmore said, "fought well until they were beaten and then they were hopeless."

The liveliest casualty was Sgt. Carl Scott of Toronto. He was sitting in bed shaving, apparently not suffering unduly from a splinter wound in the arm.

Scott was aboard a troop-landing craft which was hit five times. He said: "I didn't think any of us were coming back for a while." He told of extremely heavy artillery fire and "extremely explosive German bullets."

RECEIVES PAPERS

He was just getting his account of the fighting when a nursing sister came up with a copy of the Canadian Press news.

"Excuse me while I see how the Leafs are making out," he said, turning to the sports page.

Other soldiers also were scanning the pages of their weekly paper.

News from home was a welcome diversion from the grim memories of these heroes of Dieppe.

Appellate Court Dismisses Appeal Of Six Slayers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Aug. 22.—(CP)—Appeals of six youths condemned for the slaying of Police Constable Patrick Murphy were dismissed unanimously by an appellate court Friday which set their executions for Sept. 2.

The six had shouted "God save Ireland—up the republic," when they first were sentenced July 30.

Recover Bodies Of Drowned Children

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man., Aug. 22.—(CP)—After two days' dragging operations by Royal Canadian Mounted Police and members of the active army in Portage, here, the bodies of Ernest Hilland, 14, and his sister Madge, 12, were recovered from the Assiniboine river east of this town yesterday. The two drowned while bathing Wednesday.

4 Airmen Killed By Bomber Crash In Saskatchewan

REGINA, Aug. 22.—(CP)—Four members of No. 3 Air Observers' School at Regina, two Royal Canadian Air Force men, one of the overseas personnel, and the senior pilot attached to the school, were killed in the crash of a bombing plane yesterday at Candiac, Sask., 84 miles southeast of Regina.

Senior Pilot Ivan Bowman, 27, civilian flier from Philadelphia, and Navigator LAC. L. H. Davidson of Regina, were two of the casualties. Names of the other two men were withheld until next-of-kin have been notified.

R.C.A.F. Recruits To Be Enlisted As Air Crewmen

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Aug. 22 — (CP)—A new policy to be adopted immediately in the enlistment of men by the Royal Canadian Air Force was announced here yesterday by Air Vice-Marshal J. A. Sully, A.F.C., of Ottawa, air member for personnel.

In future, he said, all men will be taken on strength as straight aircrew instead of pilots, observers, gunners and other categories. This new system with a selection machinery will put the right men into the right positions and result in both men and officers being more satisfied, he felt.

Objector Is Given Second Jail Term

ALBERT BAY, B.C., Aug. 22. — (CP)—Allan Everett Beckett, conscientious objector who had previously served three months for failing to register for alternative service, was sentenced to another six months in jail by Magistrate A. M. Wastell yesterday on a charge of failing to report to the national war services registrar.

Coffee Allowance In United States Cut 10 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—(AP)— The War Production Board yesterday ordered a further 10 per cent. reduction in the amount of coffee available to American consumers, effective Sept. 1.

The reduction, representing a cut of about 15,000,000 pounds a month, "is necessary because of the shipping situation," WPB. said.

Civilian coffee consumption under the order will be held to about 110,000,000 pounds a month, compared with normal unrestricted consumption of about 147,000,000 pounds.

Curtin Hints At General Election

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.—(CP)—The Australian radio, picked up by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation listening post at Ottawa, Friday quoted Prime Minister John Curtin as saying that "sniping" at the government by the opposition may bring on a general election.

Major And Minor Notes—By John Oliver

FURTHER proof—if such were necessary—of the ruthless disregard and destruction of artistic treasures by the fiendish Nazis, comes from Russia. Already much evidence of the primitive rapacity of the brutes of Berlin has come to hand. The pillaging of the Louvain Library in both the Great War of 1914-1918, and in May, 1940, stands as a monument of German mental depravity. Many other instances could be cited. Last year Tolstoy's home was looted and many precious manuscripts and momentos were destroyed or removed. Now, from Russia comes further tidings of the foul doings of the Berlin beasts. Rimsky-Korsky's country home at Klin, which has been converted into a museum, was ransacked by German troops.

JOHN OLIVER

This column is informed that Russia has released a motion picture, entitled "Moscow Strikes Back," which shows the curator of the Tchaikovsky museum, emerging from a hiding place, and gathering up a partially demolished bust of the composer, and shreds of music.

It is recorded that the Germans flung some of the manuscripts to into the snow, and used others to heat the garage. But the museum, which is again in Russian hands, has now been restored, with the exception of one room which is being left in shambles, as a grim reminder of the Nazi moloch's visit.

Imagine goose-stepping" Heinies lighting a fire with, say, the manuscript scores of the Pathetique Symphony, the F Minor String Quartet, the Romeo and Juliet overture-fantasy or the Nutcracker Suite. It is not known just what manuscripts the Nazis favored, but it is certain that none but they, or their equally mentally-perverted Japanese cohorts could perpetrate such a heinous crime.

Claudio Arrau, Chilean pianist, who will appear here in the coming season in one of the Women's Musical Club Celebrity Series of concerts, has been honored, in that his native Santiago has named a street after him. He will make his first appearance here when he plays in the Celebrity Series. He is one of the younger artists on the concert platform, but he is rapidly forging to the front rank, if indeed he is not already there. He is unquestionably South America's foremost pianist. Last season he made two New York appearances in a brief period, and won unqualified success in both. Over a period of years he has enjoyed widespread popularity in Europe and South America. When only five years old, he gave his first recital at Santiago. His talents impressed the governmen to the extent that he was sent to Berlin on a scholarship when he was seven. The government continued to finance his studies for the next 10 years.

In 1924, as a young man of 20, he made a brief visit to the United States, to appear as guest artist with the Chicago and Boston Symphony Orchestras. Immediately after, he went to Switzerland, where he took part in the International Congress of Pianists.

His command of the pianistic repertoirs is enormous and he probably holds the record among pianists for cycle performances. Three years ago, while in Europe, he played, in a series of 12 recitals, every composition written for piano by Bach. He has played all of Mozart's piano works, in a series of five recitals, all of Beethoven's piano works in eight recitals, and all of Schubert's in three recitals.

These days centenaries are not being observed to any great extent. This year marked the 100th anniversary of one of the greatest exponents of French opera, Jules Emile Frederic Massenet. As France is under the heel of Hitlerism, the occasion was passed up in Paris, where many of Massenet's sweet melodies were first heard. However, at the Teatro Colon, in Buenos Aires, Massenet was honored with a program of his duets and arias sung by Marcelle Denya and Raoul Jobin, the Canadian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Association.

Recent death of Alfred Hollins, famous blind English organist, recalls that he appeared in this city in recital on Monday, Nov. 2, 1925. Alfred H. Jordan, 10533 76 avenue was among the many who attended the recital and retained the program. The recital took place at Robertson United Church and will be remembered by many music lovers. The program included "Hollins' own Concert Overture No. 1 in C. Wesley's Andante in F Sharp Minor; Bach's Prelude and Fuge in D; Hollins' own intermezzo, Spring Song and Triumphal March, written for his recitals at Sydney; Improvisation on a given Theme, The Answer, by Wostenholme; Minuet Antique by Watting; Scherzo by Turner and the overture to Weber's Oberon.

Mr. Jordan received a letter from Dr. Hollins, written from Edinburgh on Sept. 26, 1941. Mr. Jordan has permitted its publication. It reads: "It was indeed most kind of you to write me once again for my birthday. I do appreciate your having remembered it, for I don't think you missed writing for my birthday since we first met in Edmonton, now 16 years ago. We have had a very quiet and uneventful year, except, of course for this awful war, and even the war hasn't touched Edinburgh, as least as far as air raids are concerned.

"We get occasional warnings, but as a rule, they don't last long. Musicians still make a brave effort to keep all kinds of music alive, but teachers are having a bad time. There has been a series of recitals by Dr. Ault, the organist and the best locals, at St. Giles Cathedral. Ault asked me to give one but I said no, as I didn't want to risk practicing in the cold church and I'm not in love with the harpsichord. My wife and I have been fairly well this year, I am thankful to say. We had a short holiday at Earlston in July. It's a little village not far from Melrose. The surrounding country is lovely. I hear from a man in Bristol occasionally and I understand that although the city has been badly bombed and very many churches have gone, St. Mary Redcliff, the cathedral and the Colston Hall have escaped. Please remember me very kindly to all my Edmonton friends. I never forget that happy week-end. Warm regards to Mrs. Jordan and yourself in which Mrs. Hollins joins."

I ESCAPED FROM A JAP PRISON CAMP

Surrender of British Forces To Japanese at Hong Kong

Lt. Benjamin Proulx, Canadian Naval Reserve officer, escaped from a Japanese prison camp on Hong Kong Island after 34 days of imprisonment. In a series of 12 articles he tells of the British surrender at Hong Kong, his life in the prison camp, his desperate decision to escape and his first days of freedom. In the following article he tells of the surrender to the Japanese.—EDITOR.

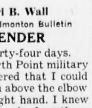
INSTALMENT 1: WE SURRENDER

I was a Japanese prisoner of war for thirty-four days.

I made the break to escape from the North Point military prison on Hong Kong Island when I discovered that I could easily encircle the wasted part of my left arm above the elbow with the thumb and middle finger of my right hand. I knew then that in a short while I would either be dead or there would not be enough life left in me to care whether I escaped or died.



PROULX

I wanted to live because my wife and two small sons were in the Japanese civilian internment camp in Hong Kong. It would be stupid and futile to die of slow starvation or disease behind barbed wire. I would never be of any use to them that way. I knew that when you try to escape from a Japanese military prison and fail you are not merely captured and put back in prison. You are put to death. There are a variety of ways in which the Japanese can put you to death. But I did not care much which way they would take. That was the way it was with me.

In the eighteen days of the hopeless fighting at Hong Kong, I had seen what the short, squat men with the long, dangling arms and blank faces could do to the human body with a bayonet. I knew what they did to women. I knew what they did to men who tried to protect these women.

It was all the same, it was death. But it wasn't a clean death. It was dirty. You died with a stench in your nose or your eyes filled with nightmares or your ear drums taut and bursting with sound. Or you died with your hands bound behind your back so that you could not even clutch at your bowels as they spilled out. Or when you were captured as a prisoner of war you were lined up and machine-gunned in the back.

That was the way the fighting was at Hong Kong. But I will tell about that later. There are many things that have been told so far that were utterly wrong and I will tell the truth about these.

That was the way the fighting was, too, at the Repulse Bay Hotel and I will tell about that also. Of the two hundred women, children and infants who were captured there by the Japanese. Of the men who went out to meet what they thought was certain death so that these women and children might live.

But I think first I should tell military prison is like. What kind what the inside of a Japanese of treatment I received. What I got to eat. Every detail of life inside the prison camp that I can remember.

GREAT LEVELLERS

I suppose that the best way to tell this is to start with the surrender of our forces to the Japanese at Hong Kong. Then it can be seen exactly how the Japanese act toward the people they have conquered. I do not think it makes any difference whether the people they have conquered are British, Canadians, Eurasians or Americans. They do not have a little gauge by which they measure their amount of hatred. It is all the same with them. So I think the treatment I received would be the same as that given to an American boy from Iowa or New York or anywhere. And it would not make much difference either if you were a colonel or a private. The Japanese are great levellers.

The day of the surrender. I was getting ready to sit down for Christmas dinner at the military garrison at Aberdeen, which is on Hong Kong Island and was about five miles to the south of the British headquarters in Victoria barracks. There were about twelve hundred of us stationed there in a large reinforced concrete building. There were Indians, Middlesex, Canadians. Men who ranged in age from sixteen to over seventy. There were volunteers, some regular army and naval men. Anyone who could handle a gun.

30 PER CENT. DUDS

The Japs had been shelling us from every angle for days, but thirty per cent. of the shells had been duds and they had been using three inch shells which made a lot of noise, but hadn't been able to do more than nick and splinter the concrete walls. So we kept on thinking we could hold out. That was what we wanted to do. We wanted to hold out. We were like Old Man Wilkins, the American stockbroker.

Old Man Wilkins keeps coming into my head. He was 73 and the last time I saw him he was going into the front lines with an old hunting rifle slung over his shoulder. I keep thinking of that old rifle and the short, squat men with their hand grenades and Tommyguns storming up the beach.

There were the Jap shells hammering at the walls but we were thinking more about what the cook had managed for Christmas dinner when they told us that it was all over. That was the way the news came. A commander in the Royal Navy came into the mess hall and made the announcement. His voice was flat and dry.

He said it was all over and that we had surrendered to the Japanese. He said we were to throw all our rifles and automatics and grenades in a big pile in the centre of the mess hall and then wait to see what happened.

CROWD NOISE

When he said that, the twelve hundred men made sort of a low, rumbling noise. It was a crowd noise. It was the kind of a noise you hear in a crowd when something happens that the people don't like. But the men were soldiers. They were under orders.

Then the commander said:

"There will be no foolishness. Every man must lay down his weapons. No one will attempt to make his way out into the Japanese lines."

So we all moved forward and put our guns in a big pile. Some of the men threw their's down but most of them just let them slide from their hands as though they were too tired to hold them any longer.

KEPT ON SHELLING

Then we stood around and waited. We did not want to eat or think about it very much. For two and a half hours after that the Japanese kept on shelling the building. That was bad. When you have a gun in your hands and are standing at your post you do not mind being shelled. But when you have nothing to do but stand around and wait and wonder what is going to happen next it is very bad.

I went to a window and looked out. It was cold and clear. I could see the blue sky and the white puffs of smoke that were the Japartillery positions. I thought how good it would be to see just one plane fly over and drop something on them. I thought how good it would be to just get in there with your bare hands. Anything would be better than just standing and waiting. I tried not to think of other things.

Then it was dusk, and after a while the shelling stopped and we stood there in small groups in the darkness. That was the way it was all night. We waited for the short, squat men with the long arms to come and get us. There was nothing else to do.

Some of the men laid down in their bunks or on the floor and tried to go to sleep or they kept lighting cigarettes and talking in low voices. Every once in a while when a match flared you could see the reflection on the heap of steel in the middle of the room. But there was nothing you could do about it.

JAP FLAG FLYING

The next morning we had orders to march out. The short, squat men had machine guns trained on us and their faces were blank. The morning was clear and cold and the sun was cold on your hands and face. The Japanese flag was flying over the Government House. I think it was only then—when I saw that flag—that I actually believed that all this was happening. I had seen the British jack flying over that building for twenty-one years.

No one spoke. We shuffled slowly along the roads and streets. We did not know where we were going or what was going to happen to us. From time to time we would see the bodies of the dead. They were tortured dead and there was nothing peaceful about them. The dead were like that.

School Group Ends Calgary Sessions

CALGARY, Aug. 22 — (CP) — Winding up a four-day convention the Canadian National Federation of Home and School dealt chiefly with resolutions yesterday.

Due to the alarming shortage of trained teachers, the federation will urge departments of education and school boards to raise salaries to a level where they will compare favorably with wages paid in defence industries and that every effort be made to protect children by as adequate selection and training of teachers, as the present emergency will allow.

This resolution was brought in by a committee and accepted by the convention.

Other resolutions urged:

A central federal bureau of education in Ottawa or near Ottawa, as a means of disseminating information to all provinces.

Federal aid to provide funds to equalize educational opportunities all across Canada.

The association promote the idea that child education is just as important, or more important, in war as in peace.

The use of the school as a year round community centre whose facilities shall be available to groups with educational and recreational programs.

The War Today

By JOHN COLLINGWOOD READE

War Theatre of Middle East Growing Daily in Importance

All signs point to the growing importance of the Middle East as a centre of Allied operations. The commanders who took part in the Moscow conferences were from Near and Middle Eastern Commands. The British Middle Eastern Command has been reorganized, with General Sir Harold Alexander succeeding General Auchinleck as Commander-in-Chief.

Before proceeding to Moscow, Mr. Churchill spent some time in Cairo, where he was met by General Smuts, the Prime Minister of South Africa. At the Cairo conference, the military dispositions and material requirements must have been canvassed thoroughly before the journey to Moscow was made.

For at Moscow important decisions were taken concerning joint Allied strategy in the Western theatre of war.

The Middle East is a strategically located centre of Allied military power which is supplied by the mines and factories of Africa, the munition plants of India and the oil of Persia. It is fed by products from African farms and supplied through the Red Sea, the Persian Gulf and a network of railways extending to India and Africa. Hitherto, our chief concern has been to defend the Middle East against enemy encroachment, and our operations are still primarily defensive. But in time to come the Middle East will serve as a very useful springboard for offensive action.

MIDDLE EAST PROBLEMS

The accompanying map shows the area of British and American military occupation in the Middle East, and the proximity of British forces to the battle zone of the Caucasus.

British and Russian troops have joined hands before, at the conclusion of the abortive rebellion in Iraq. Since then, continuous contact has been maintained between British and Russian forces, and military communications from British-occupied territory into Transcaucasia have been extended and improved.

Inevitably, therefore, British and American forces should be called in to ease the pressure on the Russian south flank should the situation get out of hand in the area from Stalingrad to Baku.

The distribution of British military strength in the Middle East calls for very shrewd judgment. The question is whether to bring support to the Eighth Army in an attempt to smash Rommel now and risk the possibility of a German break through the Caucasus Mountains into Persia, or whether to divert forces from the Northwest Frontier of India for operations in the Middle East and take a chance on a powerful Japanese thrust through Burma.

If the Caucasus proved able to strike in great force they would find the defenders of Eastern India deprived of the support they could ordinarily expect through a regrouping and concentration of the available forces in India.

It would appear that, if all the military factors are accurately calculated, the Allies possess sufficient military strength east of the Mediterranean to cope with any offensive moves which the enemy may be contemplating. The problem is to guess correctly in advance what he is likely to do and measure his capabilities.

CONTROL ENEMY MOVES

A certain measure of control over the enemy's operations can be exerted through the application of a joint plan of strategy between Russian and Anglo-American forces in the Middle East.

By yielding at one place and striking at another, the Russians can immobilize or secure the transfer of certain elements of German strength, and the same holds true of the British.

The chief defensive weapons in the Middle East are the possession of superior air strength and the presence of wider stretches of water interposed between strong German forces and their objectives. It is these factors which offset the enemy's superiority in land power and weight of material.

Every tactical consideration demands that the largest possible German force be drawn into the Northern Caucasus and held in engagement there until the weather breaks.

So long as the Russian Black Sea fleet can continue to operate, and the Volga line remains open, the peril of the German forces increases with every day that passes. For the operations in the Northern Caucasus have necessitated the transfer of much of the German airpower from Southwestern Europe, with the consequent exposure of Rommel's forces and supply lines to punishing Allied air attack. Moreover, unless Stalingrad is taken, the Black Sea fleet driven from its haven, and the Caucasus Mountains are penetrated, the Germans will have dissipated a great deal of their manpower and equipment without improving their position.

WINTER LINE DIFFICULTIES

They will not find it easy to establish a winter line in the plains of the northern Caucasus, and may reach the beginning of winter only to find that the massing of strength for their Caucasian offensive has enabled the Russians to undermine their positions in the central and northern fronts and thus multiply the difficulty of establishing protected winter lines in these sectors as well.

The appointment of General Alexander to command of the Middle East is a welcome one. He is a soldier of spirit, with plenty of experience of the enemy's methods. He was the last soldier to leave the beaches of Dunkirk, and commanded the Anglo-Chinese forces in Burma following the fall of Singapore. His campaign there must be considered a remarkable accomplishment.

It was his job to fight a delaying action, and the retreat of the British forces was a necessary strategical operation, just as the retreat of the Russian forces from Poland to Moscow was necessary to save Russia.

One of the trite sayings which, like many half-truths, have become as popular as they are misleading is, "You can't win victories by retreat." It is just as true to say that you can't earn your living by sleeping. Yet no one could earn his living who didn't sleep.

Retreats frequently play a very important part in the winning of ultimate victories. If you are fighting an aggressive enemy who has forced the issue and taken the initiative, especially if he is operating on interior lines of communication, you cannot possibly mass all your available strength at every point on the world's surface which he might attack.

You therefore distribute a portion of your strength over the main approaches of your most vital bases, or centres of power. Thereafter, you fight retreats, yielding to his superior force, while the pattern of his strategy unfolds. Thus, time is gained for the accumulation and disposal of massive strength at decisive points as they appear.

ALEXANDER'S RECORD

General Alexander's operation in Burma kept the powerful Japanese army from the gates of India until the monsoon came. And that was long enough.

As the British forces were retiring up the valley of the Chindwyn River, General Wavell said: "They have won us two months in which to prepare the defences of India, and perhaps five, because the arrival of the monsoon will hamper, if not stop, the enemy's operations."

In fighting the Burma retreat, General Alexander undertook a difficult job and did it well. In addition to this, he gained much valuable experience of the enemy's methods, which, when added to his observations in France, qualifies him for the important command he has now assumed.

On the actual fighting fronts, matters are developing about as satisfactorily as we could hope. The German drive against Stalingrad appears to have been halted once more, and this time the enemy has been set back on his heels with a jolt. The drive toward Novorossisk made a little more headway, but the enemy was unable to push home his advantage.

The Russians are offering very bitter resistance in the Krasnodar sector and counter-attacking repeatedly, but the natural barrier afforded by the Kuban River is no longer of much use to them because of the number of crossings which the enemy has been able to make in force. On the other sectors of the Northern Caucasus there is no material change.

AXIS TIDE IS TURNING

The increasing strength of the United Nations in the air is everywhere apparent. In the Mediterranean and in Western Europe British and American aircraft are ceaselessly hammering at the enemy—at his ships, his factories, his railways, his ports and concentrations of his forces. Six enemy supply ships were sunk by British submarines in the Mediterranean and off the coast of Norway, and one torpedo blew sixty feet off the bow of an Italian cruiser, which entirely spoiled its shape.

In the Pacific, American and Australian airmen carried out a furious offensive on Japanese shipping and airdromes, while American ground forces, considerably reinforced, are extending their occupation of territory on the Solomon Islands. The tide of war which seemed to roll from the Axis countries seems to have reached its flood, if it has not already begun to turn.

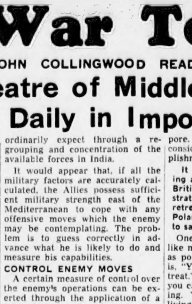
McKenney On Bridge

By WILLIAM E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

Here is a pretty, though not so frequent, situation where a defender playing second to a trick must jump up with a master card.

In today's hand the declarer let West win the opening lead. A spade continuation put South in.



Duplicate—None vul.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	1 ♣	2 ♥	Pass
2 N.T.	Pass	3 N.T.	Pass

Opening—♣ Q. 22

Declarer saw that his ambitious contract was probably hopeless. Besides losing a trick in diamonds to establish the suit, he would have to win a trick with the king of hearts to get his total of nine. The only chance seemed to be to lead a heart right away, hoping to find the ace in West's hand.

Had West played low, dummy would have won with the king and led a diamond. The first finesse would lose to West's queen and West could then clear the spades. But dummy would get in with the club king to lead a second diamond, and declarer would win four tricks in the suit, just enough to make his contract.

The alert West player saw this possibility and stepped right up with the ace of hearts, in order to clear his spades before the diamonds were established. From his point of view there seemed little risk that his play would leave the declarer with a solid heart suit, unless South had a holding which assure him of four tricks anyhow by a finesse against the jack.

Rimbey Store Is Looted of Goods

RIMBEY—A quantity of shirts, gloves and other small articles, as well as some silver from the cash drawer were stolen from a store owned by Archie McLees here this week.

A hole large enough to admit a man was knocked in the glass in the front door and the thief or thieves evidently left the same way. Some of the more valuable merchandise was not touched.

Miss Geraldine Goldfrey, who has taught in the district northeast of Rimbey for several years, has been appointed to a position in the Okotoks high school. She and her parents, who will make their home at Okotoks for the next year, left Rimbey recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey have lived in the Springdale district since 1915 and Mr. Godfrey has taught rural schools here for 15 years. They were guests of honor at a gathering sponsored by neighbors recently and were recipients of a chest of silverware.

A new store operated by Ali A. Omar is being constructed here at a cost of approximately $8,000. . . . Frank Pudlowski, Vilna, has arrived in Rimbey to join a lumber company staff.

Vancouver Child, Fully Recovered, Leaves Hospital

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Four-year-old Sharon Bell, recovered from an operation that removed a small can opener from her lung, was discharged by Temple University hospital yesterday, and with her aunt, Mrs. Eileen Murchison, entrained for her home at Vancouver, B.C. The child made the 2,500-mile trip here by plane and train after she swallowed a tin key used to open a peanut can. The operation was performed Aug. 10 by Dr. C. L. Jackson, son of the inventor of the bronchoscope.

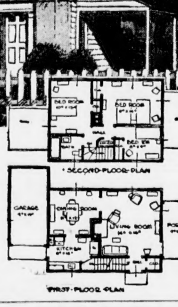
Farley Re-Elected

NEW YORK, Aug. 22. — (AP) — James A. Farley, victorious in obtaining the Democratic nomination for Attorney-General John J. Bennett, Jr., for Governor, was re-elected yesterday for another two-year term as chairman of the Democratic state committee at a meeting at the National Democratic Club.

RE-MODEL — REPAIR AND — RE-BUILD

Combining stucco, wood and shingle with gracious effect, the Denton, an all-Canadian home, inspired by Colonial architecture, provides two stories of living quarters: six rooms in all, with ample closet space on both floors.

Materials are still available here for home building, and costs, generally speaking, have not increased.



Colored Linoleum Wax Preservative

Did you know you can buy wax in colors for preserving your plain-colored linoleum surfaces? There is a product which previously has been used only commercially that comes in blue, red, green, black or clear.

This product is a splendid preservative if your linoleum is new, and if it is old, it will do wonders in restoring the linoleum surface to its original bright finish. The colored wax acts as a filler, getting right into scratches and scuffings which show all too easily on plain linoleum. It blends right into the surrounding area.

If there are bleached spots, just get a can of the wax that matches your color. Put a small amount on a soft, clean cloth and go over the entire surface. Allow it to dry. This will fill up the mars and tiny spots. Polish it and the surface will look like new.

While developed for table tops, sink counters and bars of colored linoleum, this wax also may be used on wall linoleum as well as brica-a-brac — anything that will benefit from a coating of wax.

If some one has accidentally dropped an iron on your linoleum floor or work areas which has left an ugly gouge, the same company making the colored wax has developed a special filler in colors to repair open seams and breaks in linoleum. The material is applied with a small knife, smoothed into the break and allowed to dry.

Undercoater is Valuable Asset Plaster Work

The bugaboo of the painter's world is plaster, for it must be dry before it is painted or the job will be a dismal failure and soon will peel and crack.

But painting green, unseasoned plaster can be accomplished if you use a new undercoat with an oil base. The secret of this product's success lies in its absorption powers. It laps up the moisture in the plaster and expels it during the drying-out process. Once dry, you can put on a priming and finishing coat without any of the usual waiting for plaster to season.

This undercoat is a white pigmented paint which makes two-coat painting a real possibility and eliminates the necessity for different types of undercoaters for various surfaces. It can be used on virtually any interior or exterior surface.

UNIFORM FINISH

In addition to its sealing properties, one coat of this product will hide fresh plaster patches as well as fire cracks, so that ordinary paints will produce a uniform finish.

Other uses of the undercoater are as a "prime-sealer" before finishing fir plywood, which is notably difficult to handle because of its unruly grain; as an interior sealer coating for fine enamel finishes and as an exterior primer for wood.

The undercoater can be used as it comes from the can or tinted with oil colors.

Authorities Urge Summer Check-Up

Many Canadians are going to be disappointed and discomfited this fall because they neglected to have necessary repairs made to their home heating systems during the summer.

Reasons for particular urgency about heating repairs this year are three-fold. First, because there are fewer new installations, the volume of repairs in any community may be expected to be considerably higher than in normal times. Second, due to enrolments in the armed forces and in war industries, the number of experienced plumbing heating men available is greatly reduced, and third, the large number of households which are changing from oil to coal have already "earmarked" a great deal of available repair labor.

Customarily, most householders wait until just when or just before they need heat in the house, and necessary repairs can be made almost at once. But, for the above reasons, all that is changed this year.

What every householder should do in his own and in the national interest, is to check over his home heating repairs problem carefully and give orders for repairs right away. Thus, the heating contractor who is to make the repairs can budget his time in such a way that all his customers can be served satisfactorily. It's the late ones who will "be left out in the cold."

Prefabricated Shingle Siding Excellent for Remodeling Work

If the ripors of weather and time have begun to take their toll of your house siding, it might prove economical to order a complete residing job, rather than just repairing bad spots.

Your remodeling work will be speeded up if you take advantage of a completely new development in side-wall construction, a prefabricated shingle siding which is proving a boon to fast erection of houses in war-production areas.

This new siding comprises in one panel three building operations which ordinarily were done separately. The base panel is made of fine quality insulating sheathing, which is covered with a layer of waterproofed building paper. Nailed to this moisture-impervious surface are red cedar shingles.

SPECIAL BENCHES

This three-in-one operation is not done on the job but in a licensed shop where there are special benches for this type of construction.

The finished panel is supplied in one size only, 2 by 8 feet, and is nailed directly to the studs or framing members. These shingle panels are a time and cost saver because they can be fabricated regardless of weather conditions.

In new construction, after framing has been completed and window frames installed, the entire outside wall can be nailed direct to the studs in one operation, with little waste, for the panels are adaptable to any type of house. When installed, they present an unbroken wall surface, and it is impossible to detect end and top joints because of the clever design of the finishing.

Looking Them Over

—By Jack Kelly

CANADA'S list of casualties is steadily growing longer as the war takes it toll on land, sea and in the air. This list is the real cost price of the battle we are waging. Beside the roll of those who have given their fine young lives, monetary costs become cheap and unimportant. Millions and billions of dollars mean nothing in comparison to those lives that were freely and bravely given for you and for me back here in Canada.

Whether you want to or not, stop right here for a minute and imagine yourself in the first full flush of manhood, with all the world before you and all of life to sample, laying down that life on the beach at Dieppe.

Think of all that you sacrifice—that dream home you hoped to build, that career you hoped to run, the things you hoped to do for your folks as they grew older, the clean prairie winds, sunrise in the Rockies—all the things from which the clean, bright dreams of a young man are woven.

These are not the kind of thoughts that build an optimistic, artificial morale. They are deep probing thoughts, sad and bitter but a sacred obligation for every man and woman in civilian life and the foundation of real morale.

AS THE BOYS PUSH OFF

ONE by one, fellows that I have watched grow up in sport have dropped in in khaki, air force blue and navy blue to shake hands before they push off on the great adventure. In that last chat, most of them have made it plain that they have only one great, soul-disturbing fear—that whatever sacrifice they may have to make may not bring the kind of world and life they are fighting for.

These are things a young man doesn't like to talk about, but he thinks about them just the same.

Before the 1st Battalion of the Edmonton Regiment pushed off for England, a member of that outfit sat in my office, smoking and cutting up old touches. His name is probably known to you, but you'll never get it from me. He was known as a very hard cookie in these parts and some of our more finicky citizens did not consider it any help to their social prestige to be seen in his company.

He kept sparring around with the conversation in a way that showed he had something to get off his mind.

THE LAST REQUEST

"Look, there is just one thing I wish you'd do," he blurted out at last. "I'm asking you because you've gone to bat lots of times for us guys that don't figure in no social registers or list of advertisers—guys like me that can't never do you any good in return. I guess I'll be scared plenty at times. I don't figure I have the kind of stuff in me that wins a Victoria Cross but no Nazi will get a shot at my back.

"When the payoff comes, I guess I'll be able to take it if it has to be that way—if I know that it's going to do some good. The thing that puts cold sweat on me is when I wonder if maybe this easy work out like the last war did.

"You know what I mean—thousands of boys over there among the poppies, mad whooping on armistice day, cheers when the boys come home, everybody slapping you on the back for a few days and buying you drinks and smokes, then the old brush-off—no jobs, no money; two meals a day if you're lucky; the landlord hounding you all the time for rent, and then hitting the relief line.

"If I could only be sure that the folks back here would stick with it and get a new deal after the war, I wouldn't worry about what happened to me. Do us one favor, pal. When the casualty lists come in, remind the folks what it is that mugs like me are getting shot up for. Tell them not to get soft again after this war and let politicians and the big shots put them back on the bread line."

IT'S UP TO US

NOW you know why this column is what it is today. That buck private gave me a job to do and it's going to be done.

To see that these fighting Canadians don't give their lives in vain this time, is the most sacred obligation that was or ever can be put on us who stay behind. Buying bonds, voluntary war work, and all the rest of our war efforts are only minor matters in comparison with seeing to it that this country is remade into a place where there is equal work for all, where no man, woman or child goes hungry, where all may have a home of their own, where people can get the medical and hospital care they need regardless of whether they have money and where the abundance that we can produce is distributed equally to all.

CANADIAN SPORTSHOTS

TORONTO, Aug. 22—(CP)—Why is the Canadian junior tennis team in the Seigniory Club's international invitation tournament Saturday and Sunday limited to Quebec and Ottawa district players?

That's one of those nice, burning questions which usually never are answered. But discrimination is plain in the choice of the "Canadian" team. Five of the juniors chosen are from Montreal, two from Quebec city, two from Ottawa and two from Beauharnois, Que. The entry hardly qualifies the tournament for its tag as "international."

If sponsors of the matches called it the United States vs. Quebec Province Junior Tennis Tournament, headline writers across the country would go crazy but the name would be a fair representation of the competition's nature.

Our boys probably will take a dreadful beating from the visitors because the United States team really has a national aspect and top American juniors generally are as good as our best seniors. But the degree of defeat could have lessened considerably by a judicious choice of the best juniors from Canada's nine provinces.

British Columbia, one of Canada's tennis strongholds, certainly should have been represented. The prairies probably have one or two good juniors and western Ontario has several. All have been ignored.

In comparison, here are the home towns of the American competitors: Seattle, Wash.; Hollywood, Hamtramck, Mich.; San Gabriel, Cal.; Worcester, Mass.

The one possible explanation is financing. Well, I doubt that the Pacific Coast residents of the United States team are paying their own way to the tournament. Not four of the Americans are from the far west, one from the middle west. It looks from here like old trouble—giving more consideration to a visiting attraction than to genuine promotion of the sport within our own borders.

There are about 322 thunderstorms annually in Buitenzorg, Java.

HOCKEY HEADS CONFER IN TORONTO

Bars are Lifted For Juniors Turning Pro

Permission of C.A.H.A. Not Required Now

TORONTO, Aug. 22. — (CP) — The relations committee of the National Hockey League met here Friday with representatives of this continent's other four important hockey organizations, and the meeting hewed strictly to advance notices—it was purely routine.

Most important item of business was agreement among the delegates that junior hockey players should be allowed to turn professional when and if they please. Under a former agreement between the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the National and American leagues, C.A.H.A. permission was required before a junior could turn professional.

Decisions reached at the meeting are not final, but must be submitted for ratification to the directing boards of the five organizations involved—the N. H. L., C. A. H. A., A. H. L., the International Ice Hockey Association and the American Hockey Association. Such submission generally is routine, but a veto is possible.

Frank Calder, president of the N.H.L. said after the meeting (which was closed) that there was no discussion of hockey's future.

"We are entirely in the hands of the government," he said. "Any decisions made at today's meeting are totally dependent on what plans the government has for sport and the discussions were carried through with that understanding among the delegates."

Mr. Calder said there was general agreement on the decision to recommend that juniors be allowed to work out their own future professional or amateur, because of war conditions. Most playing rosters have been slashed deeply by enlistments.

He didn't say it, but it is generally known that if National Hockey League clubs operate next winter they will be dependent to a major degree upon players of junior age, too young for military service under present call-up regulations.

"Other matters discussed at the meeting were mainly practices which have been in use for some time but were not a written part of the agreement between professional and amateur hockey," Mr. Calder said. "There also was some discussion of clauses in our previous agreement. Beyond the question of juniors turning professional, there were no changes made."

Savold was bitterly disappointed at the decision. Lee admitted his showing was not the best of his career but said he believed he had outpointed Musto. Tony, whose chief claim to fame previously was his nine-round stand with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis in St. Louis last summer, was jubilant.

Freddy Wood Blasts Par To Lead Lion's Gate Open

VANCOUVER, Aug. 22.—(CP)—Blond Freddy Wood, professional at Vancouver's Quilchena course, led the way around the first 18 holes of the 72-hole Lions' Gate open tournament which got under way here Friday.

Wood compiled a 36-31—67, five under par for the Shaughnessy layout where the 120 entrants teed off in the opening round.

Two strokes back of the leader were Lloyd Mangrum, Los Angeles and tournament favorite; Stan Leonard, Vancouver pro, and Ted Longworth of Portland, Ore., with 69's.

The skinny Harlem Hammer dropped the willing Denver warrior four times—for the last time for keeps — with an assortment of punches.

Ray Robinson

He did it right after Shank, a tough, tough citizen who slings punches from all over the house and is always on the charge, had all but floored Ray with a right-hand shot that made Robinson grab and hold for an instant. That one punch proved a big mistake for it seemed to start Robinson's blasting machinery in motion.

Three times he dropped Shank for counts of nine, and he fourth time the roof fell in on the westerner, who came seat boasting decisions over Henry Armstrong and Fritzie Zivic.

Referee Billy Cavanaugh didn't even bother to count over Shank the last time he hit the deck. This was from a straight right hand. He landed flat on his back, his neck resting on the lower rope and Cavanaugh ended it at 2:26 of the second round.

Before that, Shank was bouncing up and down off the canvas like a loose ball. A hook to the chin put him down the first time for nine. A right cross to the same spot bowled him over again. A harrage to the body did it the third time. Then came the convincer. It even convinced Reuben.

For a couple of minutes in the first round it appeared that Shank might make an interesting evening of it for the "uncrowded welterweight champion" who has won every one of his 89 amateur and 33 pro fights. Reuben came charging in, throwing punches and landing anywhere he could.

But after he connected with his "Sunday punch" early in the second, he never had a chance.

One of the interested spectators was Red Cochrane, the sailor boy and welterweight champion who will have to put his title on the line against Sugar Ray sooner or later. He really got an eyeful.

In the eight-round semi-windup, a battle between two New York lightweights, Chester Rico, 135¾, won the decision over Terry Young, 135½.

George (Sonny) Horne, promising young clouter from Niles, Ohio, was impressive in outpointing Milton Kessler of Brooklyn in a slashing six-round preliminary. Horne weighed 150½; Kessler 147.

Ray Robinson Kayoes Shank Second Round

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Ray Robinson turned loose his fistic lightning in a hurry Friday night and flattened Reuben Shank, the Colorado cowboy, in two rounds in Madison Square Garden to run his all-conquering streak to 123 fights in a row. Robinson weighed 144½; Shank 146¾.

A stroke of wildness on the 16th hole, when he hit his tee shot out of bounds kept Leonard, who played as a pro at Calgary last year, from finishing in a tie with Wood.

The Quilchena pro started erratically, sending his tee shot wild, his second far short of the green and his third 20 feet past the pin on the first hole.

But from there on he gave a preview of his later sub par shooting by sinking the putt.

Although he was in trouble on nearly every hole of the last nine, Wood found magic in his putter, sinking putts from every angle and distance.

Mangrum also started with a wild tee shot that hit a tree but it bounced back to the fairway and he was a foot from the pin on his approach. From there on he shot steady golf, par on every hole of the first nine except the fourth which he birdied. He had four birdies on the incoming nine.

Longworth went out in 36, one under par, and came home in 33, two under, to share second place.

John (Mysterious) Montague of Hollywood shot a 75 while Guy Kibbee, screen actor also from Hollywood took an 81.

Other scores included: B. Hudson, Calgary, 85.

The second 18 holes will be played today with the 60 low scores and ties entering the final 36 holes Sunday.

Hornets to Play Arrows Tomorrow

It's Hornets versus Arrows at Renfrew park tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the final game of the regular schedule of the Senior Baseball League.

In the event, however, of the Hornets coming through with a win, it will be necessary to have a replay of the tie game played between these same clubs last week.

Should the Ralph Morgan-coached crew be able to make it two straight, a three-way tie would result with al teams going into the playoffs. A victory for Arrows tomorrow would leave Phil Horne's team and the Dodgers to fight it out for the league title.

Tony Musto Scores Upset Over Savold

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP)—Tony Musto, the squat Chicagoan with the bobbing, crouching style, scored an upset 10-round decision over Lee Savold of Des Moines, Ia., in a heavyweight scrap here last night. Musto weighed 199 pounds; Savold 190½.

The 2-1 decision was booed by the crowd. Many of the 7,000 spectators and press row ringsiders believed Savold, who used an educated left hand and a hard straight right, had outpointed Musto.

Savold

Referee Eddie Lafond voted for Savold. The two judges, Dr. Robt. Eller and Dr. O. U. Singer, both of Washington, sided with Tony. On the Associated Press card Savold was credited with six rounds, Musto with three and one was scored even.

Savold looked slow and tired in the early rounds and was unable to locate the elusive Tony until the fourth, when his left jabs started to tell. Both fighters missed frequently throughout.

Musto dealt Savold some severe punishment in the clinches, using short blows to the body that hurt the Iowan. When the pair came out and boxed, however, Savold was the aggressor and looked far superior.

Savold skipped a couple of prime opportunities to put Musto in a bad hole. He cornered the Chicagoan on the ropes twice but was

Business Better at Saratoga

Boeing Colt Expected to Cop Two-Year-Old Feature

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., Aug. 22.—(AP)—The business at Saratoga race track, which has been picking up for the last two weeks, figures to get another shot in the arm today from a double-stake program featuring Devil's Thumb in the Grand Union Hotel stakes for two-year-olds, and a wide-open field in the Saratoga Handicap.

Devil's Thumb, a fast-moving youngster from the barn of W. E. Boeing, the Pacific coast airplane manufacturer, has won three juvenile stakes so far at the spa and probably will be little better than even money to make it four in a row in the Grand Union, despite the presence of some of the east's top youngsters in the field of 15 entered for the six-furlong dash.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's entry of Swing And Sway and Corydon, both recent winners over this track, are likely betting favorites for the $10,000 added Saratoga, in spite of the fact they're carrying top weights of 116 and 113, respectively. However, the field of nine for the mile-and-a-quarter also includes the improving Olympus, from the Chicago stable of Tom Howell and Roy Martin's Haltal, one of last year's better campaigners now on the road back.

In Devil's Thumb, Boeing has the leading eastern juvenile campaigner to date. He stands now as the biggest bargain to come out on last year's Saratoga yearling sales so far, having bid him in for $2,000. Up to now the colt has won more than $20,000, and in today's affair he can pick up nearly $10,000 more — if he wins under his 126-pound impost.

His chief threat probably lies in Hyperion, the colt Walter P. Chrysler, Jr., bought for $18,500 as the highest-priced yearling out of last year's sales.

Sangster Stops Docherty

"Shorts" Purcell Defeats Ex-Saskatchewan Champion

Feature of the third day's play in the city tennis tournament being held at Glenora courts was Andrew (Shorts) Purcell's victory over a former Saskatchewan champion, LAC. Heatherington. Nine matches were played Friday evening.

Purcell defeated Heatherington 6-2, 6-2, in a game in which both players displayed great accuracy and powerful forehands and he now meets Walt Stohlberg, Pacific coast champion also with the R.C.A.F.

In the only Mitchell fixture of the evening, Sub-Lieut. Bruce Sangster of the Glenora club downed Geo. Docherty of the Civil Service in three sets, 6-3, 1-6, 6-4. This places Sangster in the favorite slot for the Mitchell cup, as Docherty was conceded to be tough opposition for anyone in the event.

In the ladies' special event, the Bulletin trophy, Mrs. Ken Taylor of the Civil Service club defeated Mrs. L. McManus in a three setter, 6-4, 3-6, 9-7. This match was a good event, both players playing very steady probing around for the opponent's weak spots and putting the pressure on those spots.

Three mixed open doubles events were run off, Frank Broderick and partner Miss Peggy Molloy of Garneau defeated their club mates, Gamache and Keillor, in two quick sets, 6-2, 6-4.

In another mixed doubles match, Purcell-Swingle of Glenora downed [illegible] of Civil Service in two consecutive sets, 6-1, 6-3.

In the other mixed event, Capt. H. Richard and his wife paired together to shove aside the bid of the Civil Service pair of Harris-Gordon in two sets, 6-2, 8-6. This was a smartly played match with Capt. Richard getting splendid support from his wife both in back court and at the net, their superiority at the net and centre court giving them the advantage.

In two junior ladies' singles events, two Glenora youngsters put their club mates out of the running M. Weir defeated M. McClung 6-0, 6-3, and Miss H. Lilly defeated D. Dowser, 6-4, 6-4.

The only junior men's singles match was also a Glenora event, Bobby Mason defeating his club partner B. Butler 6-1, 6-2.

The Picobac Support Line
Home from the hayfield, weary and worn from his day of 'Farming for Victory', Mr. Picobac, Great War Veteran, Home Guard and Farm Corps Auxiliary, kissed his wife a resounding smack on her fresh, rosy cheek.
"That's because I've got such a nice little woman in the house," announced he.
"Want me to sew a button on or something?" inquired Mrs. Picobac, struggling unsuccessfully not to smile.
"What I want is a spell behind the lines," declared Mr. Picobac. "A good meal . . . a good place to put my feet up . . . and some good society. I'm TIRED!"
"You poor man!" exclaimed Mrs. Picobac, sympathetically.
"Poor nothing," retorted Mr. Picobac. "Wait till I have had my supper and a pipeful of mild . . . cool . . . Picobac and I'll be as good a man as ever. To-morrow's another day. Watch my smoke!"
"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

Sports .... Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(AP)—If there's any truth in the rumor around New York that Pat Billy Conn is about to be shipped to any officers' training camp one guy who doesn't know anything about it is William David Conn. . . . The reason Ben Jones is shipping Whirlaway to Camden for the Trenton Handicap Aug. 29 instead of keeping him at Saratoga to run for just as much dough in the Saratoga Handicap is that Ben wants to do a favor for a friend who is an official of the Garden State track. . . . The World Series broadcast will include shortwave transmission around the world to reach American soldiers and sailors on foreign service. . . . Chicago Bears used George Wilson as decoy on forward pass plays so often that his teammates call him "Quack Quack."

ONE-ROUND KNOCKOUT

As a golfer, Fred Apostoli apparently throws as many hooks as he ever did in the ring. Fred played a round with Sam Snead down at the Norfolk naval training station the other day and afterward he confessed: "I've never felt so lonesome in my life. My game was straight down the middle and I was all over the course—by myself."

TODAY'S GUEST STAR

Howard Preston, Cleveland News: "Cleveland wins a second-place award in a national contest for the elimination of needless noise and it is understood that the fact that Indian rooters had nothing to cheer about this year didn't influence the achievement."

Robinson is Rated as Best Of Them All

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK, Aug. 22— (BUP) — Accumulating evidence today tells us that the time has arrived to indulge in the ultimate in superlatives and admit that Jack "Sugar" Robinson—a slender young Negro from Harlem—is the greatest all-round fighter we ever have seen.

We say this after Robinson's impressive second-round technical knockout last night over Ruben Shank of Denver, Colo., an accomplishment that many experts will shrug off as "just one of those things."

The unorthodox youngster was battering Robinson from rope to rope for the first minute and a half of the second round, proving himself a mighty tough kid—a kid who had licked the former welterweight champions, Henry Armstrong and Fritzie Zivic—a lad who never had been knocked out.

But when Robinson—Harlem's dancing dynamiter—finished with the cowboy Shank, he left his sours jingle-jangle-jingling in such fashion that referee Arthur Cavanagh could have counted 50 over him instead of stopping the scheduled 10-round fight with Shank on the floor for the fourth time in that second round.

The finishing punch—the "coup de grace"—was a straight right hand that almost drove the brown-haired westerner through the ropes. But the ropes served as a barrier and bounced the "comm-ed" Colorado back into the resin dust on the canvas. Cavanagh mercifully stepped in a 2:26 of the second frame, stopping the bout—as he had wanted to do a few seconds before, when Shank had taken the count of nine for the third time.

But there wasn't a fleck of blood on Shank when he hit the deck for the fourth time—he was merely belted out quickly by the most explosive puncher the welterweight division has known since the heyday of Jimmy McLarnin, almost a decade ago. And we are quite certain that McLarnin was the hardest puncher in the history of the 147-pound division, since it was originated in 1892.

But the 21-year-old Ray Robinson of today shapes up as a greater fighter than McLarnin ever was because he couples blinding speed afoot with just as much dynamite as McLarnin ever packed. And he's a smart, deadly-effective boxer. McLarnin was a good boxer, too. No doubt of that—but never did he have the panther-like footwork of Robinson.

We personally rate Robinson a greater all-round fighter than heavyweight champion Joe Louis, who never has had to face the opposition that Robinson already encountered and who has virtually no footwork.

Robinson, who twice overcame the menacing barrage of Marty Servo's body barrage by virtue of his flying feet, and who licked lightweight champion Sammy Angott, decisioned former welterweight champion Fritzie Zivic the first time and stopped him the second time has what it takes.

Mrs. Webber Presents Prizes .

Manning Depot Holds Sports Variety Show

OVER 900 airmen and their friends attended the big sports variety show of No. 3 Manning Depot held in the Arena Friday night.

Mrs. Webber, wife of Wing Commander W. G. Webber, officer commanding, presented the prizes to the successful contestants of Thursday's track and field meet.

Immediately following the prize presentation a tumbling act was put on by 15 airmen under Corporal Pritchard, consisting of mat tumbling, front and back rolls, head springs, flip-flops and individual specialties. Also included were springboard and box routines.

The Juneau School of Dancing gave a display of acrobatic dancing.

There were five boxing bouts, each consisting of three 2-minute rounds.

The first bout between AC2 Carter and AC2 Cavanaugh ended in a draw, the boys being very evenly matched and giving a fast display.

The second bout was a slugging match between AC2 Cole at 150 and AC2 Allen who weighed 147. Cole's specialty was left hand jabs to the jaw, while Allen also had a good left and used it to good advantage in uppercuts. Cole was awarded the decision.

The middle bout consisting of comedy boxing between AC2 Smith and AC2 Matsimik was a draw, referee got tangled up in it before the finish. There was no decision—the judges declaring it a triple draw.

In the fourth AC2 Rohovi gave away five pounds to AC2 Agnew and after an even first round opened up the second by knocking his opponent to his knees. In the third Rohovi could not administer a kayoe but had Agnew staggering and was awarded the decision.

There was a lot of heavy punching on both sides in the final bout. AC2 Lunde at 152 was three pounds under AC2 Anderson, but both went at it right from the opening gong

Lunde floored Anderson for a count of eight in the second round and his lefts to the head in the third won him the decision.

Wing Commander W. G. Webber presented the prizes to the winners following the final bout.

Referee for the boxing was G. H. (Jerry) Delane and the judges were Frank Marsden and Eddie McSporran.

The timers were Dr. F. W. Crang and Ex-Chief of Police A. G. Shute. Frank Heller headed the committee appointing the officials.

Following are the boxing results:

AC2 Carter, H. R., 132, vs. AC2 Cavanaugh, J. E., 132—3-round draw.

AC2 Cole, F. R., 150, vs. AC2 Allen, D. J., 147—Cole by decision.

AC2 Lunde, E. R., vs. AC2 Anderson, R. W., 155—Lunde by decision.

TODAY'S MESSAGE

By REV. JOHN M. FAWCETT
Minister, Knox United Church
Didsbury, Alberta.

GOD IS, and HE CARES

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, How often would I have gathered you, —But ye would not."

THE greatest need of men today is an assurance that the Eternal God Is, and that He Cares. And every Christian should strengthen this conviction within himself, so that his testimony and witness may be clear and strong.

The faith of men is strained to the breaking point. Indeed, in many cases it has broken. Is there a God? Has He forgotten and forsaken man? Why does He not step into the scene and stop this wickedness, wanton cruelty and destruction?

The unbeliever flaunts these things as proof that there is no God. The faltering and bewildered mass of humanity finds much upon which to feed its doubts, and to cause it to turn away from religion with a gesture of despair.

The Christian religion has the only answer to these questions and doubts. And the answer is . . . There is a God . . . He is Love . . . He Cares. And the Christian who would be worthy of his discipleship will declare this faith in a strong, clear voice, and back it up with daily living that will convince others that it is true, and that they must possess such a faith.

The Bible is the history of God's dealings with man for many generations. The history of man since Bible times agrees with, and supports, all we find revealed there. God pointed the way, but mostly man refused to listen, and instead, went his own way, a way of selfishness, sin and destruction. And so it continues to this day. The world is in this great suffering because man will not obey God.

But God has not forgotten man. As in the past, so now, He stands with out-stretched hands; "All day long have I stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people." Rom. 10:21. His loving heart is aching for His children who are needlessly passing through this suffering and sorrow. It is so needless, because He suffered on the Cross that men might know of His love, and desire to save them.

And the sins of men are still putting God upon a cross, and He suffers and sorrows still, and cries out, "How often would I have gathered you to my protecting and saving Love, but ye will not come unto Me."

GOD IS — HE LOVES — HE CARES.

Bible Society Speakers Here For Campaign

North Alberta Auxiliary of the British and Foreign Bible Society celebrates its silver jubilee this year. Organized in January 1918, the auxiliary now has more than 200 Bible Society branches. These branches are organized for the purpose of staging annual campaigns for the collection of funds for the society's large world-wide services. The Society's sole source of income is from individual gifts.

In order to aid these branch and city campaigns annual visits are made by the society's district secretaries. This year these visits will be made by G. H. Vinall and Mr. J. J. Toop.

Mr. Vinall began service with the Bible Society in 1919. He is a veteran of the war of 1914-18 and served 10 years in Egypt, Palestine, Syria and Cyprus. Following that he served many years in Japan.

He will visit a large number of the branches of the British and Foreign Bible Society and by the use of lantern slides and addresses bring first-hand information about the Bible Society in foreign lands.

Mr. Toop, since 1917 provincial secretary for northeast China has had wide experience in a vast territory stretching across the whole of China, north of the Yellow River.

The Minister Moves

By EDNA JAQUES

I'll pack my sermons in a barrel
And find another field,
I'll shine them up and make them glow
Like silver on a shield.
I'll put new words in here and there,
And bring them up to date,
And take my family and myself
To seek a happier fate,

I'll leave my grudges all behind:
The rows about the choir,
The ladies' aid, the junior groups,
The leading tenor's lie.
I know they didn't mean to hurt,
But words have cruel stings;
And then perhaps I made too much
Of little trivial things.

I'll pack my sermons in a barrel,
My classics in a crate,
Forget the things we didn't like
And start with a clean slate;
A little country place perhaps,
Far from the beaten track;
A manse beside a little church,
A garden at the back.

Perhaps the Lord of common folk
Will bless my quiet day,
And hear beyond my stumbling speech,
The things I try to say;
And loving service freely given,
Though days be dark and grim,
Fulfil its previous trust and prove Acceptable to Him.

ASSESSMENT REDUCTION IS SOUGHT

Accident Fund Act Changes Urged As Industrial Need

Higher Interest Rate On Fund Investments Recommended in Brief

Broad changes in the Alberta Workmen's Compensation (Accident Fund) Act, designed to ease the burden being carried by industry in the province, were recommended here Saturday in a brief submitted to the special committee of the legislature named to review operations of the act.

The brief submitted by Chisholm-Saw Mills Ltd., over the name of J. F. McMillan, president of the company, criticized the increased cost of administering the Act from 1939 to 1940, and submitted that reduced interest rates on the board's investment had resulted in a heavier assessment of industry.

The revewing committee, which is under the chairmanship of Dr. J. L. Robinson, M.L.A., Medicine Hat, has been engaged for the past few weeks in hearing submissions regarding operation of the act from representatives of both labor and industry.

ADJOURNMENT

The committee was scheduled to adjourn at the week-end and it is not expected it will reconvene until October to continue consideration of the briefs submitted. Sessions have been held at the Legislative Buildings.

Robert A. Andison, clerk of the legislature and of the executive council, has been acting as secretary of the committee.

Several recommended changes in the act were urged in the brief presented by the company, which reported it was the largest lumber manufacturer in the province.

Protesting the increase in administration expenses for the accident fund, medical aid fund and mine rescue, the company filed figures showing that expenses had risen from $116,226.71 in 1926 to $178,057.43.

The total assessments collected (1940) amounted to $1,494,935.26 which is in excess of the previous high year of 1930, when the assess-

Vision and Light

By J. E. THOMAS, Optometrist

The sun is like a great broadcasting station sending us waves of light. Our eyes pick up these waves somewhat the way our radios pick up broadcasting programs.

When we use our radios, we tune them so as to get a single wave length at a time, because if two wave lengths intermingle and cannot be separated we hear only a squeal or jumble of sound. But with sight, it is quite different. We prefer to receive the wave lengths of all the different colors of the solar spectrum at once, because when these come to the eye, combined as they are sent out by the sun, we see what we call white light; that is, light without the appearance of any color. That is the kind of light under which we are used to seeing—the light under which we see most easily and clearly.

Sight and light are so much a part of our common every day lives that we take them for granted. Sight combined with light enables us to study, to play and to work. It brings us eighty per cent of our knowledge. Vision depends entirely on light; because when you are in a dark room you cannot see a thing even though you know there is plenty there to see. And light is of the utmost importance to life itself; without it we would all die.

Jackson Bros.' policy in their Optical Parlor, whether it be you or your family, from the oldest in the family to the youngest, is to give your eyes the utmost care, and the best service it is possible to procure.

THE QUESTION

Will Spain continue to sit on the fence, or will she join with the Axis nations?

THE ANSWERS

LEN LORDON, salesman: For more than two years the attitude of General Franco's government toward the two contending sides in the war has been poised on a very delicate balance; on general grounds it is sympathetic to the Axis and anxious for its triumph over the democracies. Spain weakened by civil war and fearful of the growing might of the allied Nations may continue to straddle the fence.

FREDERICK JONES, carpenter: The Spanish government has no love for the democracies. Its hesitation in joining the Axis is due in great measure to the fact that among its supporters there is a sharp division of opinion about what would be the most profitable course for Spain to follow.

WILLIAM TURNER, joiner: There are people in Spain into whose souls are seared by the acts of the Falange party and are waiting their chance to revenge themselves on Franco and his followers. The preoccupation of Spanish government in active participation in the war would afford this opportunity. It is unlikely that Spain will depart from its neutrality, or rather its benevolent neutrality with the Axis powers.

First Edmonton Regiment Left Overseas Service Twenty-Eight Years Ago

Thoughts of hundreds of Edmonton residents on Saturday went back through the years to the day on which the first city unit left for service overseas in the Great War of 1914-1918. On Aug. 22, 1914, the 101st Edmonton Fusiliers marched proudly away with bands playing, flags flying and thousands of persons, pent-up with emotion, fervently cheering them.

As Canada on Saturday thrilled to the news of new deeds of glory and valor performed on French soil by the New Army, there were recalled the undying feats and achievements of the Old Brigade.

The 101st Fusiliers was the first of the many units to leave here during the Great War. The day war broke out—Aug. 4, 1914—Lt.-Col. Frank E. Osborne telegraphed Sir Sam Hughes, minister of militia volunteering the services of the regiment as a whole for overseas service.

The offer was accepted and on Aug. 7 authorization came through for mobilization. In ample testimony that the unit as a whole volunteered, the regiment left here on Aug. 22 with 1,300 all ranks. When it is remembered the strength of a battalion was approximately 1,000, then the enthusiasm of all to participate in The Great Adventure, well can be appreciated.

ARM BANDS

The first mobilized at its armory, on 104 street, just north of Jasper. Some of the men had uniforms and some were in civilian attire, but wearing white arm-bands bearing the inscription "C.E.F."

Led by the regimental band, the unit marched west on Jasper to the C.P.R. station and then entrained.

The 101st sailed from Gaspe Bay with the 1st contingent of about 30,000 on Oct. 3, 1914, the sailing strength being 1,167. The remainder of the original strength has been transferred to the Royal Canadian Regiment and the Divisional Cyclist Squadron.

Practically the whole of the original unit was transferred to units of the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade on proceeding to France, Feb. 10, 1915. The remainder of the unit became the 9th Reserve Battalion.

FINE SERVICE

Officers, N.C.O.'s and men of the 101st distinguished themselves throughout the war and many continued their affiliations with militia units in between the two wars. Many others are serving again in the present war.

The 19th Alberta Dragoons, authorized to mobilize a special service squadron on Aug. 5, left here with 270 of all ranks on Aug. 26.

The Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, authorized to mobilize on Aug. 8 and drawn from all over the Dominion, enlisted 270 men in this city.

Transferred East

Section Officer Winnifred Weir, officer in charge of recruiting for the women's division of the R. C. A. F. here for nearly a year, has been posted to Windsor, Ont. FO. Saunders, air crew enlistment officer at No. 3 recruiting centre here, is posted to Toronto.

Getting Around with Jack DeLong

Total war is producing the strangest paradox in history. As the nations of the world prepare for more and more complete destruction, a parallel trend, aimed at increasing conservation, is forming a new and wonderful pattern across the page of modern history.

In his address foreshadowing setting up of complete selective service in Canada, Prime Minister King frankly warned the people of the nation they must all be prepared to carry their fair share of the increasing burden imposed by total war.

At the same time he told of plans of the government to insure the best possible standard of public health and hinted there would be some kind of national housing scheme placed in operation.

Enumerators to Be Called For Election Work

Enumeration for the Sept. 22 provincial by-election will commence Monday or Tuesday, H. H. Crawford, returning officer, announced Saturday.

He stated that he had received lists of prospective enumerators from the Social Credit and Independent parties at the week-end. These parties polled the highest vote totals in the last general election.

Swearing-in of enumerators chosen will start Monday at the returning officer's headquarters, 9616 Jasper avenue, Mr. Crawford stated. He stressed that enumerators should not report for swearing-in until they have been notified by phone or mail.

"We now have the lists of proposed enumerators and we will advise them individually by letter or telephone when they are to report to be sworn in," the returning officer said. "We don't want enumerators to appear before they are notified, as they will only jam our headquarters and delay work."

The returning officer explained that enumerators would be sent out in pairs to start enumerating voters as soon as they had been sworn-in. They will commence their duties Monday or Tuesday.

Phone number at the returning officer's headquarters, which will be open Monday, is 22873.

Following lengthy negotiations a wage and working conditions agreement has been signed between the Swift Canadian Co. branch in Edmonton and its employees, it was announced Saturday by Packing Plant Union officials.

Widow Advised to Stop Sacrifice For Children

Even After Marriage They Will Accept as Long as Parents Give; Mother Always Regarded as Source of Supply

DEAR MISS DIX: For twenty-two years I have been a widow. During that time I have reared and educated two children who are married now and have homes of their own. The question in my mind is what to do for the good of us all. At present I am self-supporting and will be for many years to come. I never intend to be dependent upon my children. They have a right to their own lives and will be happier to themselves.

I am wondering whether I should consider marriage, or continue to work and make an effort to save enough for my old age when I can no longer support myself. But when I think of marriage I realize that it would change things between my children and myself, and if they ever needed help I might not be able to give it to them. I have shared everything that I have had with them ever since they married, and I know that no husband would accept a situation of that sort, and I would not expect him to.

Should I consider my children further, or should I think of myself? I get very lonely for companionship.

W. V.

Answer: I think that whether you marry or stay single you should consider yourself. Certainly you are not doing that, nor are you laying up anything for your old age when you are giving every cent that you can spare to your married children. That is not best for you, nor is it best for them. You should force them to stand on their own feet and support their own families. Even an English sparrow has sense enough to push its young out of the nest when the time comes, for it to use its own wings.

As long as parents give to their children the children will take, because they have been accustomed to it; they think of Father and Mother only as a source of supply. But when Father and Mother fail to lay up something for their old age, the children, especially the children's husbands or wives, consider it a great hardship to have Father and Mother live with them. Think that over. You have seen it happen too often to others not to know how tragic will be your situation if you, too, become a dependent mother.

As to the wisdom of marrying, that depends upon so many things that would make it either unwise, able, or like jumping from the frying pan into the fire, is there some definite man who wants to marry you, or are you just considering marriage in general from the point of view of wishful thinking? If there were some ideal man of your own age and social class, whom you have known for a long time, and whom you have had a pleasant friendship so that you know you would be congenial companions on the last lap of your life's journey, and if the man could give you a good home and you have enough money to live on if he died, and if he had no encumbrances in the way of wives, children who would resent their father's taking a wife, I should say go to it. And God bless you.

But for the contrary, you have no common background with the man and if he is poor and would have nothing to give you, I should say it would be the wildest folly to marry him, because the chances would be that you would have to continue with your job and support him and, in addition, would have to nurse him and put up with his cranky ways.

Don't forget that you can hang onto your job for probably many years, but if you lose it, at your age you couldn't get another. Think over all these angles of your case before you make a decision.

SALVATION IN FLIGHT

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am a young man, 21 years of age. I have been going with a girl for nearly two years and she is determined to marry me whether or no, but I am not ready to marry and wouldn't marry even a king's daughter because I am too young, and I have seen too much of this young married life among my friends, most of whom are sorry they married. However, this girl has told people that she is going to get me, so what can I do?

It doesn't do any good to tell her that I won't marry her. She just won't listen.

SANDY.

Answer: Well, Sandy, your only hope is in flight. Beat it while the going is good. Enlist in the army. That gives you a good out. And believe me, the enemies bullets are not so dangerous as is a girl who has the carrying complex.

It will be in vain for you to plead your youth. She will tell you that youth is the time of love and romance and anyway, that is an objection which time will remove. Nor will it do any good to tell her that you are poor and not able to support a family. She will argue that two can live cheaper than one, and that she is willing to live on bread and cheese and kisses. The first thing you know you will be buying a wedding ring on the installment plan. And you will be paying for it the balance of your life.

Take it from me, son, no man is foxy enough to outwit a girl who has made up her mind to have him. If he stays around in her vicinity she will snare him sure, no matter how warily he walks among her traps. His only salvation is flight. In your ease absence of body is better than presence of mind. You may be able to outgrow this girl, but you can never outwit her.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I am a woman in my late thirties. Have been married thirteen years and have two children. My husband has a very responsible position. Makes a very excellent salary and provides well for us. But on several occasions he has had affairs with other women.

They have always been passing fancies, but at the present time he is having an affair with a young married woman who is working in his office. She is attractive and he apparently has fallen very hard for her. I hear that she brags about how she has taken him from me. This hussy's husband works at night, so he does not suspect her duplicity. What shall I do? Shall I tell my husband ALL and ask him what he intends to do? Or should I appeal to this girl's husband to help me break up the affair?

—D. M.

Answer: Don't call for a showdown from your husband. It gives him too good a chance to say that he wants a divorce. Ask the woman's husband to help you break up the affair. That will give you an ally. He probably will give her a talking to that will bring her to her senses and make her realize she can't have a husband to support her and a boy friend to take her out and give her good times.

McCoy Health Service

A distressing pain in the course of a nerve is termed neuralgia. Those who are suffering from this trouble are well aware of thesymptoms. Neuralgia is practically always associated with either a diet deficient in mineral elements or some toxic condition within the body, and is therefore frequently found with disease of this type, such as hysteria, neurasthenia, anemia, beriberi, etc.

Occasionally drugs or industrial poisons are responsible for neuralgia. Among these is lead, one of their frequency are lead arsenic, alcohol phosphorus, nicotine, iodine, opiates, copper, silver, ptomaines and various coal tar products.

Neuralgia may be found with any toxic condition of the body and frequently precedes or follows the acute diseases such as influenza, mumps, whooping cough, or chronic diseases such as social infections, diabetes and nephritis; or may come as a reflex, from various local infections such as decaying teeth, pyorrhea, infected tonsils, sinus trouble, prostatitis, appendicitis, and is often associated with diseases of the brain or nervous system.

Fractures and bony displacements, especially of the vertebrae and ribs are very frequently the cause of neuralgia.

NEURALGIA OF THE FACE

Usually termed tri-facial neuralgia or tic douloureux, usually caused by disease of the teeth, sinusitis, inflammation of the gasserian ganglion, or vertebral pressure.

NEURALGIA OF BACK, HEAD

May be caused by vertebral displacement, tuberculosis of the vertebrae, malignant growths of the meninges or spinal cord, aneurysm of the vertebral artery or a reflex from pelvic conditions.

NEURALGIA BETWEEN RIBS

May be caused by tuberculosis of the spine, subluxation of the ribs or vertebrae, inflammation of the heart, pleuritis, aneurysm of the aorta, exceptionally full stomach, inflammation of the spinal cord, etc.

NEURALGIA OF SHOULDER

May be caused by occupational strains, arthritis, cervical rib, inflammation of the spinal cord or meninges, subluxation of the vertebrae, or displacement of a ligament in the shoulder.

There are many other types of neuralgias named after the regions in which they are found, such as abdominal, ovarian, rectal, sciatic, lumbar. The causes are as varied as the ones already enumerated.

Many different kinds of treatment have been given to stop the pain of neuralgia. Alcohol is often injected around the nerve trunk. This sometimes relieves the pain for a little while. Some times the nerve trunks are surgically severed, which, if properly performed, leaves no future pain but of course is not advisable since paralysis is the result.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, 1151 West 6th St. Los Angeles, Calif.

Orphans Do Not Cry—Part 2

By Nellie McClung

WHEN Martha Jones, the orphan girl—alias "Sandra"—assured herself that the hollow log still housed her treasure-box in safety, she spent a happy hour beside the little stream and indulged in a rare feeling of rapture. The silver stream never seemed so full of joy, nor the ferns that grew beside it so exquisite in their grace. And the wind in the birches in her head sang like an organ. She was not going to be an orphan all her life. You couldn't be an orphan if you had a home. And she thought of there it was in front of her—that solid, square little grey house where she had been so happy and would be happy always. No one can know what a home means except those who have had no home. And she knew exactly what she was going to do. Just as soon as she could she would adopt two little girls, two homely little girls with knobby knees, straight hair, and thin cheeks—the kind no one wanted. No little girls who belonged to the lowest class of orphans. She knew all about the classes among orphans, for she had belonged to the C-3 class. Above her on the social ladder were the orphans who had parents, at least one parent, however remote and unresponsive, about that again were the children who had dolls given by aunts or other distant relatives; the real aristocrats were the orphans who received letters. Two children at the Orphanage had not let her forget her obscure origin, and many were the times when they had told her regarding her birth—stories which would have surprised the matron if she could have heard them.

SUCH A PLAIN CHILD

She remembered the day, four years ago, when she came to the house across the ravine. Two of the children took her home after evening to see Mrs. Merton's orphan, and Mrs. Merton had explained her choice. "I took her," she said, "because she is such a plain child. I believe life is easier for a homely girl than it is for a pretty one. She will never have the temptations that beauty brings. Shake hands with Mrs. Merton, Sandra. Have you not teach you anything at the Orphanage?"

"My name is not Patsy," she had cried indignantly, "my name is Martha Jones. I was called Martha Jones for the boat in which the Reverend Jones was lost, probably my mother's boat and my mother's name. I do not know much about myself, but what I do know, I am going to hang onto. So I want you to call me Martha."

"My word, isn't she a spunky one," one of the women had said—"you got your work cut out for you Sarah Merton, with this piece of goods."

That was the orphan's home-coming to the house of her adoption four years ago, and she remembered now as she sat by the little stream with a great new joy in her heart. What did it matter now? She was going to get home, one. No one could hold her back—not even Mrs. Merton.

WHO'D ALL CHANGED

The wood had all been changed for her in the last three years. Mr. Frost had taken away all that bitter meluncoly. He had assured her that it didn't matter that she didn't know who her parents were. Evidently they were strong, clean-blooded people of intelligence and honesty; perhaps they had been missionaries; certainly she had inherited a healthy body and a clear brain, and was as good as anybody in the whole world. She must never grieve over what she could not help, and perhaps some day the mystery would be solved.

The sun stood high over the ravine when she suddenly remembered that this was the day Mr. and Mrs. Merton were going into the city. She had wanted very much to go too, but she knew better than to ask. The city was "out of bounds for her. She ran back to the house across the ravine expecting to find Mrs. Merton in one of her injured moods because she had stayed away so long, but the house was empty. A note on the kitchen table told her to do the ironing, weed the onions, water the flowers that were in the shade of the house, and have supper ready for them at half-past five. She was glad to have the day to herself so she could continue with her thinking. The new Martha Jones she knew and it was soon done. Then she went back to the grey house and sat in Mr. Frost's chair. It was easy to feel his kind presence as she laid her hands on the arms of the chair where his hands had been. She thought of those long, slender hands, so sensitive and tender. Then she thought of the story he had told her and her promise that she would write it when she was old enough and wise enough. There was enough money for her education now, and she would get a bicycle and ride to the High School, and have her evenings free to study.

EXALTATION OF SPIRIT

In her new exaltation of spirit, she was able to think even a little kindly of Mrs. Merton. Perhaps it had been a good thing that her life had been dull and starved. If she had been happy she might have been so strongly to the kind heart of her benefactress.

She picked up one of Mr. Frost's books and read a poem by Louise Driscoll, called "Futility." It described Mrs. Merton so well that it comforted her like the presence of a friend. She could never be lonely in this new world where so much has been written by people who feel just as we do. The woman who wrote this poem must have known a Mrs. Merton—perhaps lived with her—and wrote this about her after she was dead:

The pigeons on the roof tops saw A small pale soul That went out aimlessly To an unknown goal

The pigeons fluttered their blue wings

And clung with coral feet.
"She goes to Heaven the same way she went along the street,
Blind to any loveliness
That she might meet."

When Mr. and Mrs. Merton came home they found all the children done and their supper ready. Much to the orphan's surprise, Mrs. Merton told her to set a place for herself at the table. "You are big enough now to eat with us, Martha," she said unctuously, "and I will try to remember to call you Martha now, or even Sandra if you like that better."

GREAT NEWS FOR ALL

The orphan looked at her searchingly, with great surprise; and even the cold tissue of Mrs. Merton's cheek seemed warm. "I have news for you," Mrs. Merton went on, almost trembling in her eagerness. "I'll open mine first of all as it seems that Mr. Frost appreciated the fact that we let you go over to take care of him, and all the other things that we were able to do for him, for when we went to the real estate office today to see if we could rent the land for a pasture, they told us that a lawyer had notified them that Mr. Frost had left the place to us, and in trust for you. Of course you know, you are legally our child, and being a minor you cannot be adopted, but in trust now that we will rent it to my brother and his family, who will move in at once, and all this rent money we can buy you nice clothes Martha, and let you go to high school, at least one parent for you to walk, and we have decided to buy you a bicycle. Now, didn't we bring you good news from town?"

DANCING LIGHT

The orphan sat looking at her with a strange dancing light in her grey eyes, and then suddenly she began to laugh.

"Now don't get excited dear," Mrs. Merton said, "I'm afraid it has been a great surprise, but you know, you can trust us and we will attend to everything."

"This is exactly like an Alger book," the orphan said at last. "We had a great pile of Alger books at the Orphanage, and I read all of them, but I don't suppose you ever read an Alger book, did you?" You and a new earth. So I can part should. It's nice to know that you with you without hard feelings."

Most people who are victims of seasickness believe that they have weak stomachs. The truth is that the stomach has little to do with it. Seasickness is a matter of balance within the middle ear, where fluids in tiny semicircular canals indicate the position of the body. The motion of the swaying ship sets up vibrations in the middle ear which produce nausea and vomiting, along with violent headaches. The same sort of sickness can be experienced in rope swings, on merry-go-rounds, in cars or in airplanes. The nausea may be increased also by seeing the motion and by smell.

MEASURE FOR RIGHT SIZE

When purchasing bedding, choosing the correct length is most important. Bedding that is overlarge is unwieldy; undersize is uncomfortable by a little least. There should be sufficient allowance both as to length and width, for generous tucking in. Allow for a blanket, at least six or eight inches over the length of the mattress on which both will be used and eighteen or more inches over the width should be allowed for sufficient tucking in.

PEACHES ON TOP

Fresh peaches are in season. Use them in as many ways as you can while they are inexpensive and at their best. Add crushed fresh peaches to hard sauce for a pudding topping. A drop of almond extract accents peach flavor.

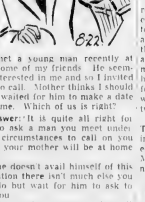
What To Do



I met a young man recently at the home of my friends. He seemed interested in me and I found him to call. Mother thinks I should have waited for him to make a date with me. Which is right?

Answer: It is quite all right for you to ask a man you meet under such circumstances to call on you when your mother will be at home too.

If he doesn't avail himself of this invitation there isn't much else you can do but wait for him to ask to see you.

If he wants to see you he will find a way—and if he doesn't, there isn't a thing you can do about it. That's the way the world works and we can't change it.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Twenty-five or more years ago when mothers first became self-conscious about scientific child-care and feeding, their first rebellion against the practices of the past was to do just the opposite of what had been done. Because the old-fashioned mother nursed her baby every time it cried—and when breast milk "gave out" hushed his hungry cries by feeding him tastes from the family table, the modern mother went to the opposite extreme and gave her baby nothing, positively nothing but a milk formula, until close to the end of the first year.

This particular generation having just been introduced to schedules and regularity and success-ful "modification" of cow's milk for infant feeding, became a slave to schedules. Diets were cut and dried and alike for each and every baby. Babies were fed every four hours to the hour—not even five minutes before or after—and not one spoonful more than the diet sheet subscribed.

Undoubtedly, this is the usual course of any reform and the present generation, by its very familiarity with it, has managed to escape its bondage. Not only is there a tendency to give the baby his head when it comes to dictating his feeding hours, but everything the old-fashioned mother did during the infant—quite unscientifically—now is fed as a means of favoring baby with a well-rounded diet.

In general, what this generation seems to respect is the personality of the baby. Babies seem to digest their food better and have bigger appetites when they get large meals infrequently rather than a mouthful or less every three hours for it. Their stomachs seem to profit by the long rest periods and their gains are as rapid. This only means that the modern mother has been forced her baby to wait for four or five hours between meals but she does feminine at the prevailing interval when she discovers the baby is indifferent to his food.

The result is a modern conscientiousness about diets, but plenty of flexibility and no fussing. And were babies ever bigger or better-natured or did they ever put their teeth with less difficulty and were they ever more gorgeous? That is the only word for it.

Yet we must not smile, we are blind and completely without perspective, our present day methods of feeding are sure to leave in vogue 40 years than 20 years ago

Each generation makes changes representative of its own independent thinking, but ideas cannot be too different since we are dealing always with eatable foods. Today things are far from static in nutritionary and unique as the modern mother may imagine. Babies are being fed with some of all the good foods available, just as they once were fed in those unscientific days two generations ago.

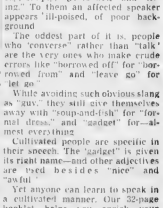
Crude Vocabulary No Social Asset Old Acquaintances Are Snobs?



Frozen by a couple who were married in March? Don't sleep on her pillow tonight—"Snobs"

She'll never realize it was her own fault that that repellent item, for she imagines that her "Where are you RESIDING?" and "I always BATHE earth," are ultra-refined. But unfortunately people don't use such pretentious words. They say, simply, "go to bed" and "bathe." To them an affected speaker appears "ill-poised, of poor background

The oddest part of it is, people who "converse" rather than "talk" are the very ones who make crude errors like "borrowed" for "conferred from" and "leave go" for let go.

While avoiding such obvious slang as "guy," they still give themselves away with "soup-and-fish" for "formal dress," and "gadget" for—almost anything.

Cultivated people are specific in their speech. The "gadget" is given its right name and other adjectives are used besides "nice" and "awful"

And anyone can learn to speak in a cultivated manner. Our 32-page booklet helps you enrich your vocabulary, lists frequent mistakes in English and pronunciation, with correct forms. Explains words often misused.

"Y" Worker Is Recent Visitor In Edmonton

Changing conditions due to the war, a larger volume of travelling and the centralization of population in industrial centres, have brought their own problems to the Y.W.C.A., Miss Rhuna Osborne, social welfare secretary of the Vancouver "Y" said during a visit here this week. Miss Osborne visited the Edmonton Y.W.C.A. for two days this week, en route from Vancouver to Toronto.

She has been requested by the National Y.W.C.A. at Toronto to make a survey of the work done by the Social Service and Travellers' Aid departments of the "Y" in wartime and was here to observe conditions in this district.

"Work of both these departments has increased to a great measure, because of the war," she said. Increased volume of travelling has brought additional problems for Travellers' Aid secretaries who meet trains and assist strangers.

Work that the national organization is doing for girl and women workers in industrial centres was also mentioned by Miss Osborne. "The Y.W.C.A. is anxious to meet the situation today and give service to both the country and the war effort. She stressed the advantage of records and reports and will be able, she said, at the conclusion of her survey, to present statistics to the National office which will help the office to meet the new demands of war time.

Miss Osborne met members of both local committees Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Kenneth W. Reikie presided. She has left the city to visit Saskatoon, Regina, Winnipeg and Ontario Quebec and the Maritime provinces.

War Auxiliaries to Petition For Four Tag Days a Year

Absence of Tag Days Prevents Sending of Christmas Parcels to Husbands and Sons Overseas; Resolution For More Tags Adopted at Friday Meeting

Adopting the resolution that a letter be sent to the Advisory Tag Day Commission in the city, asking for four tag days a year, or an explanation if not allowed any tag days, a number of women representing seven war auxiliaries, gathered Friday afternoon at the Memorial hall.

Mrs. E. Brown was chairman, and Mrs. Alan Sachse assisted with the conducting of the meeting.

Mrs. Sachse explained that the purpose of the tag day was to get enough money to send Christmas parcels to men in service overseas. At first, she said, the auxiliaries were promised seven tag days a year, and then they were allowed only four. A little later the Advisory Tag Day Commission told the Canadian Army Active Welfare Committee, which represents the seven war auxiliaries, that there would be no tag days at all.

FOR CHRISTMAS PARCELS

The auxiliaries believe that it will bo difficult to raise enough money to buy Christmas parcels for the men in England, if they are not allowed at least four tag days a year. If, however, the post office objects to the women sending large parcels at such a rushed time of the year, or if in so doing, valuable ocean passage would be obstructed, the members explained that they would be only too glad to restrict the size of their parcels, or send something else in place, such as money.

The seven auxiliaries represented at the meeting were: the Women's Auxiliary to the Edmonton Regiment, Auxiliary to the S.A.R., of the 29th Canadian Armored Tank Regiment, Auxiliary to the 92nd Battery, 61st Battery Auxiliary, Women's Auxiliary to the Signalers, Auxiliary to the 4th Casualty Clearing Station, Women's Auxiliary to the 9th Army Troop.

The four tag days a year would be distributed as follows: the Edmonton Regiment, one; the S.A.R., one; the 61st Battery and 92nd Battery, one between them; and other smaller auxiliaries, one tag day.

It was explained at the meeting that there were 20 or more war auxiliaries in the city, but only seven asked for tag days. Members of these auxiliaries were told of the community chest in the city, but they said that it did not assist them to raise funds for the men on active service.

COST-OF-LIVING

The Welfare Committee also decided to send a letter to Mr. A. Walker, Calgary, Dominion president of the Canadian Legion, to ask the Legion to support them in their plea for a cost-of-living bonus for the dependents of men on active service. The women think that the dependents are entitled to a cost-of-living bonus, the same as other workers.

The city housing situation was discussed, and the members urged the Dominion government to help finance the building of small houses to do away with congested rooming.

Curtail Football Air Mechanics

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(AP)—All competitive football schedules at United States army schools where air corps mechanics get their training have been cancelled in an order possibly presaging further cuts in the widespread military sports program.

Maj.-Gen. Walter R. Weaver, commanding general, wrote the several score school heads under his command that inter-school or inter-camp football would interfere too much with the urgent training of technicians needed for the air forces.

There has been no effort to eliminate intra-mural sports, such as games between units of one command

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—(AP)—Selected stocks continued to reach for higher levels in today's brief market proceedings although many leaders lacked recovery animation.

Aiding buying sentiment to some extent was the cheerful war news from the Pacific and the growing belief in financial circles that the United Nations were getting ready for a real blast at the Nazis in Europe. In addition broadening earnings for many companies despite taxes and other heavy costs drew attention to individual issues.

October Wheat Is Unchanged

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22—(CP)—At the close of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today the October wheat future remained unchanged unchanged at 90 cents a bushel.

Mills made purchases in the wheat pit and it was indicated the buyers were waiting for further announcements from the wartime prices and trade board regarding wheat prices.

Quantities of No. 1 and 2 Northern were taken by shippers with mills making purchases of odd cars of No. 4 Northern.

In the coarse grain market buyers showed interest in a report export permits will not be necessary for sales of feeding grades to United States. It is believed that supplies will move in fair volume to the United States after the harvest.

Country marketings yesterday totalled 279,000 bushels compared to 1,453,000 bushels a year ago. Grain inspections at Winnipeg yesterday totalled 366 cars compared to 529 cars last year.

WEEKLY LIVESTOCK REPORT

Report from the Edmonton stockyards for the week ending Aug. 22.

Receipts	Cattle	Calves	Hogs	Sheep
Aug. 22	165	23	501	142
Week	1636	311	1925	842

Trading was active on the cattle market the forepart of the week with prices steady on the quality offered but closed decidedly lower on all classes. The United States quota for the third quarter is now completed, and ceiling beef prices will undoubtedly control live values. All classes of butcher cattle declined 50c to $1 per cwt. Good to choice steers at the close were selling from $9 to $9½. Good to choice heifers $8½ to $9. Good light fleshy cows ranged from $6½ to $7, and good heavy cows $6 to $6½. Bulls sold from $6 to $7 with the odd one at $7¼. The following are the quotations:

CATTLE—

Good-choice fed calves	$9.50	to	10.00
Good-choice steers	9.00	to	9.50
Fair to medium steers	8.00	to	8.50
Steers, common to fair	6.00	to	8.00
Good to choice heifers	8.50	to	9.00
Fair to medium	7.00	to	8.00
Common to fair	5.50	to	7.00
Good-choice light cows	6.50	to	7.00
Good-choice hvy cows	6.00	to	6.50
Fair-medium	5.00	to	5.50
Common to fair	4.50	to	5.00
Canners and cutters	3.00	to	4.50
Good bulls	6.00	to	6.75
Odd	7.00	to	7.25

Stockers and feeders were in demand throughout and the bulk of good steers traded from $7 to $8 with a few short keeps topping $8½. Heifers were from $7½ down and stock cows $5½ down.

Veal calves unchanged, good to choice handy weights $10 to $11 with the heavy and common kinds selling from $9½ down.

The hog market remained steady basic for shipment $14½, locals $14. Plants basic $14 to $14½. Sows liveweight on the stockyards $9 to $9½, dressed $11 to $11½. Feeders averaged $10.65.

Mechanical-Minded Youth Builds Model Ferris Wheel

By H .M.

Can you remember your first ride on a ferris wheel? Can't you experience all over again, that intoxicating feeling of going up, up, and up, and then suddenly falling through the bottom of the world. That was a great day, but it was only a day, and how often since then have you wished that you had a ferris wheel in your own back yard?

An industrious Edmonton lad, namely Stanley King, of 11517 96 street, thought the same thing after he had four rides on the ferris wheel at the Edmonton exhibition recently, but he did something about it He got together a set of two-by-fours, apple boxes, nails and a hammer, and made himself a ferris wheel, in his own back yard. It looks rough and it squeaks, but it works like a charm and the tots in the neighborhood are crazy about it.

Stan, who was a grade nine student at Spruce avenue school last year, just turned 14 He loves any kind of work with bolts, and when discussing his activities, he said that he would like to be a machinist. For this reason he would like to go to the Technical high school next year

The short (he only measures about five feet when standing on his toes) smiling lad is quite proud of his ferris wheel accomplishment, but not half as proud as his two younger sisters, 10 and 11 years old, who think the whole apparatus is wonderful. Stan explained that two years ago, he made his first "wheel," but he grinned as he told how it didn't stay together long This one has taken a lot of banging around, but it seems to be indifferent to the cruelties of the world.

STANDS 14 FEET HIGH

The whole thing stands only about 14 feet in height, and has two seats. The person riding in the top seat must climb up a ladder-like contrivance and when he is settled all is well. You have to pump yourself by pushing the two pivots holding the seats. And after you have gained sufficent momentum, the "wheel" will go round and round by itself. The chairs which revolve on an iron bar are made of apple boxes, and believe it or not there are no splinters. An iron pole holds you in place.

At first, Stan charged the boys and girls in the neighborhood a cent for a four-minute ride, and they all flocked to the scene. Now they can get on free if they want to.

When asked about his school and the subjects he liked best, the young mechanic puckered his mouth and said he liked geometry, but was positively no good at English. Manual work and anything to do with carpentry fascinate him. He has two brothers in the air force, Gordon, who will receive his wings at Rivers, Man., and Jim who joined recently.

Starting Thursday, Stan will be employed at an electric machine shop for the rest of the summer. There he will be initiated into the arts of welding, he hopes. In the meantime the ferris wheel will go round and round, and will likely still be going when the fair comes to Edmonton again next year.

Young Canada Has New Ways To Economize

You just can't keep the young people of Canada and their energetic ideas down Does a war make them "bog down" and complain because they can't have this, or they can't have that?

No! They just turn the tables and spend all their time thinking up new ways to make money to buy War Savings Stamps, or to give to the Red Cross.

They have fun doing it too, and there is all the more satisfaction about doing a task when you know that you're being patriotic and helping those in service of the King

You can have fun just saving the little everyday things of life. All the ordinary things that go towards making up your day-to-day life now are enlisted in the great cause of fredom. You save this and salvage that.

Take for example around any average home. Most of you, perhaps when you get up in the morning, use a little more soap than is necessary by leaving it soaking in the water. Then you use just a fraction more toothpaste than you require, and perhaps just one extra paper handkerchief

Perhaps that bobby-pin you put in your hair—if you are a girl—has just fallen out again, because the spring is gone. Did you throw it away, or did you save it? The Red Cross salvage needs all of them

Eating breakfast, do you eat your crusts, or just throw them to one side? Take an extra moment some time and think of the thousands of starving children in war-torn Europe—children who ordinarily are just as fun-loving and mischief-making as you.

SAVE RUBBER AND CHALK

When you get to school do you pelt elastics and chalk at your pals when the teacher is out of the room? Besides annoying the teacher when he or she is trying to keep cheerful in spite of it all, this wastes valuable rubber and chalk. Use the latter as far as you can. Don't throw it away as soon as the sharp edge wears off

Do you waste scribblers by drawing foolish cartoons of your teachers and your friends? or do you carefully conserve every page so that you'll have an extra nickel left over to put towards the purchase of War Savings stamps.

As a matter of fact, as I write this, a guilty feeling is beginning to twinge my conscience, for I begin to think of all the items I unnecessarily waste myself.

HE WAS YOUNG, ONCE, TOO

The chief of the provincial public relations branch of the national war finance committee suggested that perhaps small boys could save their shoes, and others' nerves, by not kicking stones and tin cans. He refers to his own boyhood when he made his parents' life miserable by requiring a new pair of shoes every week.

English Children Learn About Allies in the U.S.A.

"Know America" Program Begun In Britain

LONDON—One large group of England's 44 million people still has the American way of life mixed up with red Indians, "Ruggles of Red Gap" and Hollywood movies picturing the nation worried by an over-abundance of gun molls and blazing tommy guns.

Much of that is going to change, however, if British school teachers have their way with "Know America" projects.

Already, at one London school, 500 pupils have completed 100,000 hours of study about America

The headmistress of this Peckham school in southeast London said it went even further than that The parents of all the children got interested, too.

GETTYSBURG ADDRESS "GOES BRITISH"

Each night in the homes of the Jones, the Smiths, the Roberts, the small tradesmen who compose this borough, you could hear echoing around the kitchen table Lincoln's Gettysburg address and the battle hymn of the American republic.

Even the family heads went off to work each morning assigned to collect information about American civil air lines or the raising of cattle in Texas.

Typical classroom projects were albums. Freddie Groves, age 11, had the stars and stripes and an eagle for the cover of his. Inside were pictures of President Roosevelt. Cordell Hull was labeled that second most important man in America. "He believes in Anglo-American friendship." General MacArthur was allotted the center-spread—No. 1 spot.

Doreen Cheeseman had a picture of the Reuben James which was sunk—but America has many more ships like this."

AMERICAN HISTORY BOOKS ARE A PROBLEM

The children of St. Stephen's school in Sheffield are discovering America too. In the courtyard of their school the headmaster has outlined the U.S. and the 48 states. Each student in geography class is assigned a state and told to gather information about it. In addition, they've also established correspondence with other same-age pupils who live in each of these 48 states.

To spread this "Know America" project throughout British schools, the Whitehall board of education has been conducting short courses for teachers who, as a group, know little about the country. First course to held in London had 230 attending. Three-quarters of the teachers came from elementary schools, one-fifth from secondary schools, the remainder from technical and normal schools.

Men and women who lectured gave a general picture of American life and institutions and a brief background in U.S. history. Literature, art education, labor problems, geography were discussed.

Lack of "suitable" textbooks on American history presents a problem. Those printed in the U.S. well, you know how our version of the American Revolution would be received over here.

Y.M.C.A. Camp At Elk Island Is a Success

Lives there the boy with soul so dead that never to himself has said "My weeks at Camp Kee-Way-Dhin were the happiest times in my life." Thursday, July 2, the Y.M.C.A. camp opened on Elk Island amid the beauty of Elk Island Park. Thursday, Aug. 6, the curtain rang down on one of the most successful camps ever held.

Camp as always was divided into two sections, the junior section and the senior section each living on its own side of the island, coming together for meals and activities which centred in the large, log-sided lodge. Equipped with a huge fireplace, piano and phonograph the lodge is the ideal centre of activities for camp.

Previously to the opening of the camp six Y.M.C.A. leaders journeyed to the island to get the camp opened and everything ready for the first flow of campers.

During their days at camp the boys were taught the art of canoeing, the precision of archery, the skill of boxing as well as many other camp tricks. The camp owns a fleet of canoes, in which the boys were taught to paddle, how to upright a capsized canoe in the water and how to beach and rack canoes.

CAMP OF MEMORIES

Camp Kee-Way-Dhin is called appropriately, the camp of memories. Listen to what one camper remembers: "Camp has many memories for me. Chapel, on a beautiful Sunday morning, and we hear the Big Chief read, 'This is the salutation of the dawn,' or it is evening after volley-ball, and a gorgeous sunset throws a mass of color behind the little islands, for a perfect picture. A moonlight paddle is a never-to-be-forgotten experience as the canoe slips silently over the glass-like water. These are just some of my own memories."

Another camper says: "As I think back to the times I had at the Park, in the woods, on the lake, on the playground, at dinner, around the council fire at night and through the day, I cannot help but feel that it was all worthwhile. I sincerely hope that the true spirit of camping was caught by us all and brought back to the city. The lasting friendship made at camp, the deep remembrances of some places of solitude, the enchanting sounds of the night, the magic beauty in every limb of every tree makes me hope that every fellow who was at camp this year is living up to the ideals he learned there."

Camp director this year was W. Armour Bull, Boy's Work Secretary. He was assisted by John Pemberton, director of program; Kenneth Deane, waterfront supervisor; Hugh Rea, games and craft supervisor; Jack Berry, who was provincial novice middleweight champion in 1941, director of boxing; Norman Brown, Bob Willis, Bill Rea, Hadley Ward, John Merrick, Alex Sallanych, John McDiarmaid and Gordon Brechin.

Tuxis Groups To Begin Fall Activities

Bill Pettigrew, chairman of the Edmonton Boys Work Board has made the appeal that every Tuxis mentor and Trail Ranger leader get together with his boys immediately to discuss plans and organize his fall and coming season's work.

The assurance that the Boys Work Board is behind you, and that you will get every bit of cooperation from them that is possible is guaranteed by the extensive work that has been done by the Tuxis Forward Movement this summer, whereby a comprehensive survey of the work in the whole city has been tabulated and plans are now in operation to establish active groups in every church where a willingness to have such a group was expressed.

Another important factor that will assure success this year will be the help of the Rev. Grey Rivers, new provincial boys work secretary. His experience and his driving enthusiasm are going to do great things this year for the Tuxis movement.

The Mentors Club will be re-organized again early in September and profiting by last year's experiences will have leadership training courses and outstanding men to guide old and young mentors in this new year's work

Write immediately to the Provincial Boys Work Board, I.O.O.F. Building, Calgary, for your registration card and the helps that you will need in organizing your groups in early September.

This column next week will have a message to all mentors, and to all boys from our provincial works secretary.

Clever Plan For Economical School Miss

Ingenious young high school co-eds eager to surprise their families and their friends the first day of school will start gathering old ties from father, brothers and uncles. Then after a few hours careful sewing on the machine, a bit of trimming here and a bit of fitting there they will have a clever economical skirt . something new and something different for warm fall days with that cardigan sweater.

Proof that the acquisitive instinct develops in women at an early age is the necktie skirt, the latest brainstorm from the high school set.

A complete skirt of men's neckties can prove various phases of popularity. For instance, a girl may be in great favor with "the one" (and he is generous with his cravats); or her admirers may be numbered by the dozens and she has collected a souvenir from each.

A predatory high school lassie accumulating enough ties for a skirt might also be something of a menace to the old man's tie rack, not to say to the haberdashery assortments of uncles and brothers

In any case, the school chits have a fashion here on which to lavish their budding creative energy. It is a good game, assembling 25 neckties and putting them together in an eye-pleasing arrangement of colors and patters Furthermore it is a patriotic salvage of materials. Whoever thought of a better use for old ties?

A regular pattern for making this skirt can be obtained at little cost. You simply clean the ties, press them and with pattern to direct, cut a panel from the top of each. Piece the panels together, gather the continuous strip of them together in a band top, turn in a hem, add a placket and the skirt is made.

For girls who are making their first sewing effort a little advice may be necessary. Your local sewing center's experts will be glad to instruct you.

Royal Family Shares Life of Britons Under War

THE KING as a business man. His majesty keeps long office hours, and his duties as head of a great empire at war are probably more arduous and exacting than those of any other man in Great Britain

CHARMING STUDY of the King and Queen as husband and wife exchanging amused glances as they watch their children being photographed. The royal family lives much like any other British family in wartime, and practices economy every bit as strict as any of their subjects

KEEN INTEREST and concentration are written on the faces of the Queen, Princess Margaret Rose and Princess Elizabeth as they watch the King posing for his photograph

PRINCESS ELIZABETH smiles in "big sisterly" manner at Margaret Rose as they discuss a picture in a book

THIS DELIGHTFUL "father and daughter" study was made when Princess Margaret Rose visited the King's office and his majesty took time off to give her a "dialling" lesson

MOST INTIMATE "home picture" of the royal family ever made is probably this unstudied group gathered around the fire. Centre of interest is the 16-year-old heir to the throne, Princess Elizabeth who stands in the centre, busily knitting

ALL MEMBERS of the royal family devote themselves to busy programs of war work. Here, apparently, Princess Elizabeth has struck a slight snag in her piece of knitting, and the Queen leans over to diagnose the trouble and offer advice

When a Girl Marries

By RENE RYERSON MART

THE STORY: Enid Sharon has accepted Tom Dixon's proposal but is not sure of her love, knows that she doesn't want to marry immediately. She tells him, off with a modern excuse about having to take a business job with one of her employers. Returning from her evening with Tom, Enid finds her parents are about to take a month's vacation at a lake resort. Enid decides to invest her savings in a "spree" of her own, goes to look at a furnished apartment. A blond young man, whose face is familiar, answers the door.

CHAPTER IV

PUZZLED by the unexpected familiarity of the face before her, it was a moment before Enid found her voice. She couldn't remember ever having seen the man before, and yet she had a feeling that she ought to know who he was.

"I've come to inquire about the apartment for rent," she managed at last.

He smiled a quick and easy smile. "Oh, yes, of course. The janitor usually shows these apartments, but he's not here just now." He held the door wider."If you'll just step in a moment, I'll get the keys and show it to you."

Enid stepped timidly into the room and subsided into the chair nearest the door. It was a straight chair with a rounded back and thin curved legs and covered with a greenish brocade. She discovered too late that it was an authentic antique. The springs in the seat were gone and it was as comfortable as sitting on a rock pile. She remained poised gingerly on the edge of the seat, fearing that even her slight weight might wreck it.

The young man smiled more broadly sensing her predicament. "I think you'd be more comfortable over here on the lounge. That chair is strictly for ornamental purposes."

Flushing with confusion, Enid chanced her seat to the deep-cushioned divan he indicated. He nodded his satisfaction, excused himself, and vanished.

Enid looked curiously around her. The room was long, with plain yellow walls, and carpeted from wall to wall with a rich red carpeting that matched in color the divan on which she sat. Opposite her was the most enormous desk she had ever seen. She was staring at it with fascinated eyes when the man came back.

"That desk—" Enid said timidly. "I've never seen anything like it. Is it an antique, too?"

He was obviously pleased at her interest. He smiled his pleasant smile again. "It's an antique all right. It's made out of an old rosewood piano that my great-grandmother brought over with her from England. My mother handed it on to me when I fitted up this bachelor apartment."

Enid apologized. "I didn't mean to be curious."

"That's all right," he assured her. "Do you like antiques?"

"I—that is—I don't know. I've never seen many." The words were out before Enid realized that they made her seem ignorant. "I mean," she amended hastily, "that I never paid much attention to them."

She was vexed with herself and her even upper teeth caught the edge of her lip.

He smiled again broadly. "Well, you're much too young and pretty to bother your head about antiques anyway."

Enid wasn't accustomed to being complimented, and her flush deepened. In an embarrassed silence she followed him down the corridor to one of the apartment doors near the front of the building. He didn't know which key on the ring filled the door, and it took some minutes by the trial and error method to find the right one.

"This is a furnished apartment," he said as the door finally swung open. "Is that what you wanted?"

Enid nodded her head and drew a sharp breath of pleasure as she stepped in and looked around. She stood in a long spacious living room, modeled much in dimensions as the one in the man's apartment. But there all resemblance ended.

This room was furnished in a delicate feminine style. A wide davenport and a wing chair were upholstered in a light floral design against a cool green background. There was a white leather chair and a reading lamp before the radio, and in the opposite wall space a tall carved secretary with another leather chair drawn up before it to balance the room.

The floors were covered with a soft green carpeting, there were the sheerest of ruffled curtains looped back at the windows, and some really good pictures on the walls. There were occasional tables and white lamps, and a low bookcase filled with brightly-bound volumes and colorful pottery. It was the kind of a room she had dreamed about.

She followed the young man into the dining room with its graceful Duncan Phyfe furniture.

"This apartment belongs to an elderly lady who has lived here for years," her guide was explaining. "Her husband died recently and she has to economize now. So she asked us to sublet the apartment while she is away on a trip with a friend. She left all of her furnishing intact, even to her Hayland china, and we'll have to be careful whom we rent to."

His eyes were mischievous as they met Enid's. "I don't suppose you have more than four or five children."

The pale rose that crept up under her transparent smooth skin was very becoming. "No—I'm not married. You see—" she had rehearsed this painstakingly so that it would sound natural, "I only want a place for about a month. I'm a fashion artist and I've come here looking for a position in one of the stores. If I don't get one I have to go back home."

He moved through the dining room. "Hadn't you better look the rest of the place over?"

There was a bedroom with gorgeous mirrors, a tiled bath, and a diminutive white and yellow kitchen. Her common sense was vanquished.

"I love it," Enid breathed. "It's just what I want."

But what if the rent was more than she could pay, or what if the young man asked for credentials? She'd look rather silly referring him to the office and having him find out that she was a $20 a week stenographer.

She needn't have worried. As a landlord the young man was extremely lax.

"Well, I guess that's all then, Mrs. Alton said I was to let it for just the rent of the apartment if I could find a suitable couple." Again his eyes twinkled mischievously. "That's $75 a month."

"I'll take it," Enid said quickly. "I'll give you a check now. She'd better hurry before he changed his mind. She sat down at the secretary and took out her bank book and fountain pen. "To whom do I make out the check?"

"I guess it will be all right if you make it out to me. My mother owns this place. And I live here. So I take care of things when Jim's not on the job." Enid supposed Jim was the absent janitor. "Henry Holliday's the name," he finished cheerfully.

Enid paused with her pen in mid-air. Henry Holliday—she knew now why he looked so familiar to her. That was the name of the doctor she had read about in the paper, the man whose face she had admired. She felt her color coming again as she hastily wrote and handed him the check.

He didn't bother to glance at it. "When will you be moving in?"

"Over the week-end, if that's all right."

"Certainly. Well, here's your key —and I hope you like it."

Enid lay awake for hours after she went to bed that night. She was too excited to sleep. And when at last her eyes closed, she sank into a mad welter of dreams in which new apartments and blond young men with toothbrush mustaches were hopelessly mixed.

Canada's Destiny In Post-War Years

KENTVILLE, N.S., Aug. 22 —(CP)—The years of post-war planning will be Canada's years of destiny, D. G. MacKenzie of Winnipeg, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, declared in an address here last night before a meeting of representatives of Annapolis Valley Boards of Trade.

Air Force Unit Leaves Monday On Recruit Trip

Now that Canada's matchless soldiers have come to grips with the enemy, the call for greater air support to protect the gallant land forces of the dominion becomes more insistent.

And this call means that more and more young men are needed to train as pilots, observers, wireless air gunners and navigators.

RECRUITING TOUR

A mobile recruiting unit from No. 3 R.C.A.F. recruiting centre in Edmonton, will leave here Monday for districts east and northeast of the city.

FO. W. C. M. Barrell, accompanied by Sgt. Jack Grosman are going on the tour.

Even after almost three years of war, the demand for men and women to serve in the Royal Canadian Air Force is greater than ever. At no time since 1939 have so many openings of all types been available. As the tempo of the war increases, more and more men are required to fly the planes that daily carry death and destruction to the axis powers. For every plane in the air, dozens of mechanics, wireless operators and other skilled workers, both men an dwomen, are needed on the ground.

The Air Force urgently requires mechanics—wireless operators, pilots, navigators, observers, bomb aimers, and air gunners. Lack of education is no longer a barrier to enlistment; the Air Force is equipped to train applicants in all trades and offers regular pay and allowances during the period of schooling. Applicants for air crew training may be granted leave until after harvest if it is desired.

Women serving in the R.C.A.F. permit many eligible airmen to be released for flying duties. Women are needed as cooks, waitresses, drivers, stenographers, clerks, and telephone operators. Unskilled workers will be trained in the service for the trade chosen. There is an opening for everyone in the Royal Canadian Air Force Women's Division.

All eligible men and women are asked to contact the mobile recruiting unit of the Air Force when it visits their locality.

He is a photographer. He was born at Saskatoon on Nov. 26, 1918. He attended Garneau school and received business training at Calgary. Prior to enlisting he was with the Western Messenger at Thorsby. He enlisted in the R.C.A.F. on Aug. 18, 1941, and received his training at Rockliffe Park, Ottawa. Proceeding overseas in April of this year he has been active in operations. He has two sisters, Mrs. E. C. Coley and Mrs. D. Halbert, both of this city.

Getting Around

in the opinion of this column. He stated that reconditioning of the physically unfit would be undertaken through plans of the government. He also said that public nurseries for children would be established to care for small children whose mothers would be engaged in war work.

Both of these features will remain after the war, we predict.

Surely this is real social progress at last. Human machinery is soon to receive equal priority rating with power plant and mill machinery. That the government of Canada has recognized the necessity of conserving to the utmost all human resources, as well as material resources, is greatly to its credit.

Once it has been demonstrated it is far cheaper to have public health on the same basis as sewage, water and power we will hardly return to the ways of yesterday.

Sickness is now being viewed as a form of sabotage, which is exactly what it has always been.

And surely sabotage exists also in the days of peace.

Why should the health of a nation be a matter for individual decision? Do we permit individual residents of a city to decide whether there shall be sidewalks or pavements in front of their particular dwellings?

The more complex a society becomes, the less individualistic a person may be, insofar as matters of general public welfare are concerned. After all there are no absolute definitions of freedom and liberty.

A person living in the bush, miles from other people, can do many things that just can't be done on Jasper Avenue.

Modern total war demands and will get co-operation. No other decision is possible if we are to survive. The total peace of tomorrow will also receive co-operation.

The signs and the symbols are present in increasing numbers.

Seek Changes Accident Fund Assessments

ments collected totalled $1,345,403.51, the brief stated, adding: "The administrative expense for 1929 is given to meet any argument that the great increases in recent years can be justified by the growing volume of assessments and awards in the same period."

It was further stated: "The increase in costs of recent years must stand as an indictment of the present administration."

INVESTMENTS

Dealing with investments by the board, the company claims: "In the year 1938 approximately 95 per cent of the board's investments were in Alberta Savings Certificates, Alberta Bonds, Municipal and S.D. (School District) debentures. The loss of interest covering these investments has been very heavy and industry has had to carry the load."

With reference to the reported loss resulting from reduction of interest rates on Alberta bonds "which must be met by increased assessments from industry," the brief stated that the loss on rate reduction from 1938 to 1940, inclusive, totalled $169,663.13.

It was further stated that the board had fixed 3 per cent as the earning rate on fund investments, when practically all the boards in other provinces in Canada set their returns at 4 per cent.

The company submitted that at the close of 1937 the accumulated deficiency in the accident fund reserve was $75,707.92. "In subsequent years it rose to $532,254.33 and $526,521.10, to drop again in 1940 to $154,265.30," it was stated.

In this connection it was claimed: "This deficit would not have existed if the operations of the board had been conducted with ordinary prudence and if the government had not withheld payment of half the interest owing with respect to Alberta debentures.

RECOMMENDATIONS

In its recommendations, the company's brief included the following:

Adoption of the 4 per cent rate for computing the earning power of the invested pension fund and that excess monies collected since the 3 per cent rate was instituted be applied to reduction of assessments until the excess is exhausted.

That the government pay back to the board the annual loss in the cut of interest rates on Alberta securities since June 1, 1936.

That the present rate of assessments of the lumber industry be reduced to the level of 1938, which was 75 cents per M.B.F.M.

That the act be amended to permit industry to ask for a review of all claims.

That industry be notified before a final decision is made by the board setting up a total or partial pension. In this connection it was stated industry should have this right since it is "charged at all times with the cost of pensions."

SAFETY WORK

That safety inspectors working under the board be paid from the government's general revenue fund, and that an inspector of the safety department check twice a year with mill operators to see that proper safety precautions are being observed.

In conclusion, the brief stated:

"The Chisholm Saw Mills Ltd. wish to assure your committee that at all times we have received the fullest consideration in matters of policy from the chairman of the Workman's Compensation Board, and from his senior and junior officers in matters pertaining to administration, but as we have pointed out all through our brief the administration and management of investments is out of balance compared with administration and management of investments of industry, and therefore affects the assessment of the Chisholm Saw Mills Ltd., which if allowed to continue will place industry in such a chaotic condition that they will not be able to continue operations above 70 per cent of normal capacity."

Edmonton, Wainwright Sea Cadets Inspected by Lieut.-Gov. Bowen

One hundred and fifty Sea Cadets from Edmonton and Wainwright were inspected by His Honor Lieut.-Governor J. C. Bowen at a colorful ceremony held at the Sea Cadet camp at Kapasiwin Beach Friday afternoon.

Headed by the Edmonton Sea Cadet bugle band the boys marched past the saluting base with the verve and steadiness of well-trained sailormen, and won high praise from Lieut.-Governor Bowen, an old soldier, for their splendid display.

Accompanying Lieut.-Governor Bowen on the inspection were Lieut.-Commander Carl Clement of the Sea Cadets, and Sub-Lieutenant W. Calder, R.C.N.V.R. Following the march past the camp was inspected.

Also at the inspection were George H. Steer, K.C., president, northern Alberta branch of the Navy League of Canada; R. E. Staples, John A. McDougal, members of the executive of the league, Julian Garrett and Alfred Chard.

Following the inspection the visitors mingled with the lads, enquiring about their two-week camping experiences. All the boys were jubilant over their stay, and the vast majority of them were regretful that the camp was breaking up on Sunday.

The boys were housed in tents loaned by Military District No. 13, and received their training on the water in navy cutters and other craft.

Thursday evening the boys were given liberty and a weiner roast and other festivities were staged.

OFFICERS ATTEND

Other officers attending the ceremony were Lt. L. D. Hyndman, K.C., Lt. C. Wilbraham, Wainwright, Lt. Peter Douglas, Lt. A. C. Emery, and Chief Instructor Charles Mann. Cyril Ellinger attended the camp as civilian instructor.
